THE LOWING HERD of Congressmen, preparing to wind lowly home to get itself re-lected, expresses satisfaction ith work accomplished. To the oters, it appears to have played he part of an automaton, a sort f legislative "robot," carrying ut orders from the White ouse. That is what a majority f the voters wanted done, and Congress does what the voters want, when it knows what that s.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT in letter sent to West Virginia, xpresses satisfaction with the chievements of NRA.

"We have spread employment, we have raised pay, and we are NOT THROUGH YET.

"It is a notable record of recovery. It has led the way for other nations, and has produced widespread, and, I believe, permanent results. Certainly we have a right to celebrate this anniversary."

The NRA executives, with pride, show these results of their work:

Manufacturing production up 50 per cent. Department stores sales up 46 per cent. Variety store sales up 86 per cent. General country store sales up 66 per cent.

And, most important as a test of national recovery spending power optimism in March, 1933, the American public bought 118,000 automobiles, and in March, 1934, it bought 336,013 automobiles, an increase of 184.8 per cent. Also iron and steel production increased 200 per cent; bituminous coal, 62.5 per cent; electric power production, 14.9 per cent; freight car loadings, 15.3 per cent.

Important to publishers. magazine advertising increased 23.5 per cent, and newspaper advertising lineage 35.7 per cent.

In April United States exports were 70.9 per cent above last April and imports increased 59.6 per cent.

There is no doubt, whatever your opinion of NRA and "government interfering in business," that government "interference" has stirred up activity in what was a stagnant business and industrial swamp of despair.

THE "LICENSING PROVISION" of NRA which has now lapsed, gave the President power to force recalcitrant industries or business men to comply with NRA orders, or go out of business. The President never once used this power to issue or refuse a "presidential license" to any business man.

The licensing power was allowed to lapse, without renewal, at the urgent request of Gen. Johnson, who declared that the American industry could govern itself, without any licensing or veto power.

The most aggressive action of the lawmakers during their dying moments was developed in the Senate limiting the President's use of unexpended RFC funds to five hundred million dollars, whereas the President had asked authority to use up to three thousand million dollars.

Once upon a time, five hundred millions would have been considered "a good deal of money," enough to build the Panama Canal, for instance, and several other canals. But it is merely petty cash now.

Swift legislation, pushed along by Senators and Representatives anxious to get home, was interrupted for a moment by Senator Huey Long, introducing a bill to have the government take care of bankrupt farmers. But that difficulty was overcome.

AT MINEOLA, Long Island, Mrs. Lucy F. Kirk, a Christian Scientist, brought suit for injuries suffered in an automobile collision. Justice Paul Bonynge told the jury, which agreed with him, that if pain and injury are not real, but imaginary, as Christian Science teaches, then a Christian Scientist cannot properly claim damages for personal injuries.

The justice said to the jury:

"If pains are not real, and fractures do not exist, obviously you men are in no position under the law to award damages that do not exist. If they (the injuries) are not real, as, according to the teachings of the departed patron saint of Christian Science, then, of course, she, the plaintiff, has no place here."

The justice pointed out that the plaintiff had refused to accept the assistance of a doctor. The jury found for the defend-

BULLETIN.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—(AP.)—Adjournment of Congress by nightfall became more probable with Senate acceptance this afternoon of the revised bill appropriating over $2,000,000,000 more to finance the government in the year beginning July 1.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—(AP.)—Democratic pressure for adjournment of Congress by nightfall made headway this afternoon.

The Senate voted 41 to 39 to take up the $2,000,000,000 general-relief appropriation bill as agreed upon by conferees of the two branches.

Senator LaFollette, (Rep.), of Wisconsin, had asked instead that the bill for a board to mediate rail labor disputes be given priority, but lost to the Democratic leadership by the narrow margin.

Previously, Senator Bulkley, (Dem.), of Ohio, had withdrawn his motion for consideration of the omnibus bill amending banking laws, one of the several that caused the Saturday night tie-up preventing adjournment.

After the expected Senate acceptance of the appropriation measure, action was to be asked by Senator Robinson, the Democratic leader, o nthe bill to make it easier to borrow money to build and repair homes.

ADJOURNMENT CHANCES

Should this conference report also be accepted, the parliamentary situation was expected to be such as to permit adjournment, unless long filibuster speeches intervene.

The House put it squarely up to the Senate by adopting and send-

Two hundred men were at work in the department, but all except the 13 escaped injury.

One man was killed in a separate accident at the Ford plant this morning. He was Russell Clark, who was caught in a conveyor belt. He died in the plant hospital.

First Girl, First Fight At Age of 19, Baer Says in Own Story

By MAX BAER

World Heavyweight Boxing Champion

CHAPTER I

I was told that at the very beginning of my story I should try to say something important—I mean something that people will think is important. So how will this do?

(1) I never had a girl friend of any kind until after I was 19.

(2) My first girl was Olive Beck, a high school girl, later a waitress. She sued me for breach of promise.

(3) The first girl I ever really courted—and she was the second girl of my lifetime—was Dorothy Dunbar. I married her. Not so long ago, she divorced me.

Gay Maxie Baer

Girls, who have said lately that my Romeo stuff is swell, probably won't believe those statements, because they will think that in six years—I'm 25 now—I just couldn't get all my technique. But I'm a fast learner.

Maybe these are some more important things to deal out:

(1) I never struck a blow with my fist until I was 19.

(2) If there was a yellower fellow in the whole state than I was up to the time I was 19, he must have been a Chinaman.

(3) Plenty of times, until 19, my older sister, Frances, saved me from getting beaten up by tough boys who just wanted the fun of slapping me around. Frances would come to my rescue whenever I got trapped and my legs couldn't carry me out of trouble.

I'm not kidding. That's the truth. Few people have lived in more actual fear of death than I lived in fear of physical suffering.

Football Too Tough

I never went in for sports as a kid. Played a little baseball—but didn't like it. Tried football—too tough. We didn't have many other games near our ranch at Twin Oaks, Cal., which is just outside of Livermore, and the exercise I got was from working in a gravel pit, or on the ranch wrestling calves.

Plenty of fellows have written stories about me saying I had my first fight at a dance hall, all because of a girl. Chalk up an error for them. It wasn't about a girl. It was because of a jug of stolen wine—which I hadn't stolen.

I didn't know how to dance until after I was 20. I didn't take a girl to that dance. The truth is I never had, up to then, kissed a girl, held a girl's hand or escorted any girl around.

I was afraid of them—and that's the truth. The only girls in my life up to the time I was 20 were my sisters, and my older one was my protector.

When situations arose wherein I had to talk to a girl, I never could make the grade. I'd get tongue-tied, mumble—and beat it. And there'd be a cold sweat on my forehead like there is an a kid's forhead who has just escaped the police.

All of this must give the girls I've met in the past few seasons a laugh—a lot of laughs. But laughs are good for girls like Jean Harlow, June Knight, Alice Faye, Myrna Loy and the others.

I've met hundreds of girls—thousands of girls—since

Masked Man in Chief's Chair Shoots Policeman

MATAWAN, N. J., June 18.—(AP.)—Patrolman John Flood, 32, a rookie officer, was critically wounded today in police headquarters by a mysterious man, masked in white, who opened fire from his seat at the desk of the chief of police.

Flood had been on patrol duty near the borough hall which houses the police headquarters when he saw a red light flashing in front of the building, signaling him that he was wanted either to answer the police telephone or report to a superior officer.

As he reached the chief's office, he said, he discerned in the half-light a figure in a hunting coat and cap, wearing a white mask, seated at the chief's desk. The masked man immediately opened fire, and one of his first shots hit Flood in the head, lodging in the back of his neck.

Flood fell but whipped out his service revolver and returned the fire as the man fled. Flood tottered to a fire box and turned in an alarm.

RICH DENTIST FOUND SLAIN

Beauty Held in Climax To Tragic Kidnaping

International News Service.

OMAHA, Ill., June 18.—The body of Dr. Homer L. Meyers, prominent and well-to-do Eldorado dentist was found shot to death on a farm near here today.

The dentist, who was believed kidnaped, was last seen yesterday afternoon in company with a stranger who posed as a land buyer.

The farm on which the dentist's body was found was the one which the stranger had expressed interest in. The dentist had been shot in the back.

BEAUTY HELD

A man who registered at a hotel at Shawneetown, near here, as Lee Armstrong and with whom the dentist was last seen, was being sought.

The stranger's pretty brunette companion, who registered as Mrs. Lee Armstrong, was arrested and taken to jail at Harrisburg.

The arrest was made after Mrs. Naomi Meyers, Dr. Meyers' wife, told officers her husband had failed to return home last night after setting out for Shawneetown yesterday afternoon with the stranger "to look at some land."

HIDES IDENTITY

A check of license numbers on the car which Armstrong drove revealed the plates were issued to a Harold St. Clair, of Urbana, O., officers said.

They also said the woman admitted she was not her companion's wife. She declared, officers said, that her companion had informed her at 9 o'clock last night that he expected to make $6,000 in a deal with Dr. Meyers. The woman refused to give authorities her name but said her home is in Houston, Tex., and that she had met her companion two months ago in Corpus Christie, Tex.

DOOMED TO GAS, WINS NEW TRIAL

DENVER, June 18.—(AP.)—The Colorado Supreme Court today granted a new trial to Walter Heppin, 18, formerly of Newark, N. J., and Louisa, Va., who was under sentence to die in the lethal gas chamber at Colorado Prison for the fatal shooting last fall at Colorado Springs of Vincent Regan, Colorado College student and taxi driver.

Regan was killed during a holdup.

It was a four to three decision. The appeal to the Supreme Court was fought by Philip Horbein and David Rosner, Denver attorneys. They volunteered their services. Gov. Ed C. Johnson had refused to commute the death sentence.

The youth pleaded guilty and the death penalty was recommended by a jury after hearing evidence in the case.

Heppin testified he shot Regan when he resisted the holdup. He told the jury:

"I didn't intend to shoot him, but I got worked up and I shot where I didn't mean to."

Scotland Yard Seeks To Identify Victim As U. S. Woman

International News Service.

LONDON, June 18.—Great Britain was shocked and mystified today by an apparent trunk murder which the police and press immediately linked with the disappearance of Miss Agnes C. Tufverson, American woman lawyer who vanished shortly after her marriage to "Capt. Ivan Poderjay," now held in Vienna on a charge of bigamy.

The finding of the torso of a woman in a trunk in the Central Railway Station at Brighton, an important South Coast seashore resort about 50 miles from London, galvanized Scotland Yard and other police agencies into immediate activity. An immediate effort to identify the woman was launched.

The Evening Star asked in a headline:

"Is this the victim?"

The Star pointed out that the American police had asked Scotland Yard to co-operate in the search for Miss Tufverson, a former resident of New York.

The trunk was left at the Brighton Station two weeks ago, though both the railway officials and the Brighton police refuse to make any statements.

The torso was found wrapped in brown paper. The head and arms had been sawed off.

JOHNSON PLANS DRASTIC REORGANIZATION OF NRA

NOTED LEADERS NAMED AS ADVISERS

Industrialists Vote General 'Clean Bill' At Secret Meet

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—A drastic reorganization of the NRA is going to be made shortly by Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson.

He confided his plan to 30 odd present and former members of his Industrial Advisory Board, all representative of practically every business, at a secret meeting they held in Hot Springs, Va., yesterday to consider procedure after the NRA expires as an emergency organization next June.

The industrialists, whose chairman was George H. Mead, president of the Mead Corporation, Dayton, O., indorsed Johnson's plans "as necessary," gave him a clean bill of health for his past efforts, voted the fundamentals of the NRA be made permanent after 1935 and established a board of 21 prominent industrialists and businessmen to more closely advise the NRA on industry's viewpoints.

PERMANENT BOARD

The new industrial board will be permanent and will replace the present Industrial Advisory Board, the membership of which is rotated.

Just what changes will be made in the NRA were not disclosed and the industralists were pledged to secrecy. Johnson has agreed to consider the advise of the new industrial board in effecting his general shakeup of some NRA policies and perhaps personnel.

MEMBERS LISTED

Five of the 21 board members will reside here to advise the NRA and to represent many business interests. They will receive salaries. The 16 non-permanent members will receive no pay and their selection must be approved by Secretary of Commerce Roper, since all are members of his business advisory and planning council. Three of these 16 members will be chosen by 13 of the board's membership.

The 13 who will be recommended to Roper for appointment are John J. Raskob, automobile executive; Lew Han, leader in the retailing field; Robert Douglas Stuart, vice president of the Quaker Oats Company; De Lancey Kountze, chairman of the Devoe and Reynolds Company; George H. Mead, president of the Mead Corporation; H. P. Kendall, of Boston; Morris E. Leeds, Philadelphia; Walter C. Teagle, chairman, Standard Oil Company of New Jersey; Ralph E. DAVIS ON TRIAL IN ILLINOIS

International News Service.

CARLYLE, Ill., June 18—With his father, mother and sister in attendance, the trial of Thomas A. Davis, Jr., 19, of Pittsburgh, on charges of assault with intent to kill and robbery with a gun, began in Circuit Court here this afternoon.

The charges against Davis grew out of the wounding of Deputy Sheriff J. H. Donnewald last September when the officer sought to question the youth about an automobile. Donnewald claims he was shot by the youth, who he says took his car and escaped only to be captured at Kansas City, Mo.

After his return here, Davis was taken to Pennsylvania for trial on a charge of murder in the slaying of a highway patrolman. He was acquitted and brought back here.

charged with bigamy. The trunk belonged, according to the police, to Miss Tufverson.

He is said to have admitted marrying Miss Tufverson in New York last December, shortly before she disappeared. He also is said to have admitted marrying Mme. Susanne Ferrand, with whom he was living at the time of his arrest.

Mme. Ferrand was arrested today and taken to police headquarters for questioning.

Mme. Ferrand, when the trunk was discovered in the attic of the house where she lived with Poderjay, declared it was empty. The startling discovery that it contained clothing belonging to Miss Tufverson was regarded by the police as having a very important bearing on the affair.

It was shortly after police had seized and opened the trunk that Mme. Ferrand was arrested.

JPoderjay, although admitting marriage with Mis Tufverson, was quoted as saying that he knew onthing of her whereabouts. He expressed the belief she might have gone to India.

Breaking under questioning, police said, Mme. Ferrand admitted she had made an incorrect statement when she said that Miss Tufverson's trunk had been shipped to Jugo-Slavia. She admitted the trunk found in the attic of the house where she and Poderjay lived was Miss Tufverson's.

The trunk was filled with Miss Tufverson's personal belongings, including valuable dresses, furs and lingerie.

Police were continuing the questioning of Poderjay and Mme. Ferrand, as well as their search of their home, in the hope that definite clues to the whereabouts of Miss Tufverson would be obtained.

U. S. Sleuths Trace Trunks In Woman's Disappearance

NEW YORK, June 18.—(AP.)—Police have been searching for Miss Agnes C. Tufverson, woman lawyer, who was reported missing since last December 20 by her sister, Miss Olive Tufverson, of Detroit.

In reporting the disappearance of her sister, Olive Tufverson said the missing woman had been married December 4 to Ivan Poderjay, now held in jail in Vienna.

Police showed particular interest in a number of trunks reported at four or five, which Poderjay was reported to have taken with him when he sailed for England on December 22. The authorities were concerned particularly about a large black trunk registered in Poderjay's name and consigned to Southampton.

The missing woman was described by the Bureau of Missing Persons as being 5 feet 6 inches tall, 43 years old, with dark brown bobbed hair. She weighed 135 pounds and had dark blue eyes.

In checking Miss Tufverson's last known movements, police learned she had visited on December 22 a storage warehouse across the East Twenty-second street apartment house where she had lived. At the warehouse she sent a package to her sister in Detroit, paid the approximate cost of sending it and told a clerk if there were any additional charges she could be reached at 31 Westdowne Grove, Bayswater, London, W2.

The visit to the warehouse was the last known appearance of the woman outside her apartment house. A few hours later, it is believed, she drove away with Poderjay, en route to a steamship pier. Her movements have not been traced beyond that moment.

GOVERNOR FEUD BRINGS TROOPS

BISMARCK, N. D., June 18.—(AP.)—Federal troops were posted before the Federal Building today as Gov. William Langer and four co-defendants prepared to submit arguments for a new trial on charges of defrauding the United States government.

A small group of spectators gathered in the expectation that the court would impose sentence.

It was said that the soldiers were called as a precaution against any trouble that might develop.

Sentence of Langer and four co-defendants was deferred by Federal Judge Andrew Miller today until June 29.

Arguments on a motion for a new trial will be heard then.

Meanwhile North Dakota had two Governors.

Lieut. Gov. Ole H. Olson took the oath of office as Governor and plans were made to institute court action to oust Langer on the theory that his conviction of a felony made him ineligible to continue in office.

Labor Defense Head Assails Police Here

Hacker charged a complete hookup of the Pittsburgh police and city administration with the Jones & Laughlin and other steel corporations."

OFFICIAL QUITS LOAN BOARD

WASHINGTON, June 18.—(AP.)—John F. Hamilton, of Detroit, said in a statement today he had resigned as manager of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation for Michigan in order to keep "a group of politicians" from "an opportunity to frame me."

The resignation was effective Saturday.

The statement said that since the Michigan office was established "it has been necessary to stage a continual fight against inefficiency and lack of co-operation from the Washington office of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation."

SPLIT DENIED

Denying any split in the "rank and file" of the workers or leaders, heads of that faction in the Amalgamated declared they were stronger than ever. The vote of the delegates to the convention held here last week did not indicate that the delegates had been split up by the talk of President William Green of the American Federation of Labor.

Earl J. Forbeck, McKeesport leader of the rank and file, stated:

"We decided it was the wisest move we could make at this time. The men as a whole are stronger if anything than they were before.

"We wanted President Roosevelt to know we didn't want to strike and would do everything we could to avoid it."

TIGHE HEADS GROUP

President M. F. Tighe, of the Amalgamated; Thomas Gillis and E. W. Miller, vice presidents, and Louis Leonard, will go to Washington tonight as the emissaries of the steel workers.

Arriving there tomorrow morning, together with William Green, they will go to the office of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, who is trying to arrange a conference with the President.

Tighe said:

"The men have always had the greatest confidence in President Roosevelt, because of his fairness. They feel he is a friend and trust him."

STRIKE BELIEVED AVERTED

Whether they will be able to see the President will not be known until they reach Washington, Tighe said.

Full authority for calling a strike, should President Roosevelt reject the four-point peace proposal of the steel workers, has been vested in the officers of the Amalgamated, but many observers believed that a strike had been averted and would not now occur.

ing there a resolution for immediate adjournment.

President Roosevelt, meanwhile, went his own way outwardly, at least, unconcerned over the mixed-up Capitol situation. He studied bills just arrived at the White House, signing one authorizing $522,000,000 for road construction over a three-year span.

As one of the final decisions reached today with difficulty, Congress authorized the Federal Trade Commission to continue its utilities investigation until January, 1936.

One bill that Senate majority leaders held out hope for was the House-approved Kerr bill to control tobacco production through taxation.

HOME AID BILL

One of the few remaining "must" administration bills was that to make it easier for people who want to build or repair their homes to borrow the necessary funds.

Committees from both branches worked through the morning to reconcile the Senate and House versions.

House and Senate managers indicated the chief dispute was over a House amendment to permit the Home Owners' Loan Corporation to invest $500,000,000 in building and loan associations.

Republicans were outspoken in their criticism of Saturday's developments, having felt there was an understanding to pass the housing, labor and appropriation bills and adjourn.

Some said the pressure for other bills, such as the Frazier farm mortgage relief measure, and the railroad labor bill, was a violation of the understanding.

Senator Hastings (Rep.), of Delaware, said he was ready to oppose any effort to approve the railroad labor bill, and there was also strong opposition to the Frazier bill.

HUEY AND DILLINGER

Senator Huey Long said the official papers on the conference report of the farm mortgage bill had been lost. He demanded that they be located.

The galleries roared at his statement that:

Vice President Garner had to warn the galleries when Long suggested the safest place for Dillinger to hide was right with the papers in the Capitol.

Robinson pleaded with Long to stop talking so the Senate could vote on the appropriations bill conference report.

He assured Long of a vote on the Frazier bill.

Long continued talking, however, insisting there was some "hocus-pocus" in connection with the disappearance of the papers.

Meanwhile, parliamentarians said that—barring a filibuster on one of the conference reports—it would be easy to act on these and adjourn.

The conference reports are privileged and can be called up at any time. When the reports on housing and appropriations had been approved, the leaders could then bring up the adjournment resolution, which is not debatable, and the session would be over, unless enough members were willing to prolong the session to vote down the adjournment proposal.

GALLERIES CROWDED

While leaders feverishly sought to speed adjournment spectators filled Senate galleries hours ahead of the time set for the session, hoping for a continuation of the spectacular parlimentary play of Saturday night.

Business on the House side was far less attractive to the tourists and Washingtonians, too. It had only to wait on the quarreling Senate, for routineapproval of the last legislation.

Representative Byrns, the Democratic leader, had the customary adjournment resolution in his hands; but admitted to reporters that it did not mean Congress would get out tonight. He said:

"It's all up to the Senate."

It would take Congress only about 15 minutes to complete the program which was actually scheduled to be approved before the end of the session. Old-timers could not remember when a Congress got so close to the end of its work and then struck a snag.

The snag was made by pressure for legislation not embraced in the customary adjournment agreement between the party leaderships.

ROOSEVELT AT WORK

While negotiations proceeded at the Capitol, President Roosevelt continued to lay responsibility for enactment of the administration program and for adjournment upon congressional leaders and went ahead with his regular business.

The President set aside an hour in the middle of the day for signing the batch of bills sent to him Friday and Saturday.

He is still planning to leave Washington tomorrow night for New Haven to receive a degree from Yale on Wednesday. This trip is contingent upon adjournment of Congress by that time.

If Congress does adjourn tonight or tomorrow, Mr. Roosevelt will go from New Haven to New London by water, to watch the Saturday boat races in which his son, Franklin, will participate as a member of the Harvard freshman crew.

From New London, he plans to motor to the family home at Hyde Park, N. Y., to spend next Sunday, returning to Washington Monday.

Weather Conditions

Low pressure occupied the plain states yesterday morning in the form of a long trough. This morning the trough extends from Hudson Bay southward over the Lake Region and the Ohio Valley states to a center over Eastern Tennessee. The disturbance produced generous rains along its path, nearly everywhere from Canada to the Gulf, and it is raining this morning in Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, West Virginia and Virginia. High pressure is centered over Kansas, and covers most of the plains states, and another low is moving in over Alberta. The weather is warm over most of the country, but there were no extremely high temperatures yesterday except in the Far Southwest. Over the Ohio Valley states the maximum temperatures were 90 degrees or slightly above.

River Conditions

The rivers are falling slowly. Stage at Franklin is 0.1 foot; Lock No. 7, Mon., 10.6; Pittsburgh, 9.8; Dam No. 4, 9.0; No. 6, 7.4; No. 10, 4.7; No. 12, 7.5. The dams are up. Flashboards are now on Monongahela dams, from No. 10 to 15, inclusive, ranging from 16 to 24 inches high. The 24-inch boards are on dam at Lock No. 13.

CAUSE OF ASTOR ROW REVEALED

off the stormy courtship by offering Miss Gillespie $1,500,000.

Her parents objected to intrusting her with such a large sum at her 18 years, and it later was reduced to $500,000 in the form of a trust fund, the newspaper declared. The fund was to be returned to the Astor estate in the event no children were born of the marriage.

4 AUTOS IN 2 WEEKS

The Journal continued quoting a close friend of the Gillespie family whose name was withheld:

"Meanwhile, Young Astor became more and more sullen. He dined with the Gillespies only twice, once in New York and once in Newport. He alarmed the family by most extravagant plans to buy two new houses, motorcars and a yacht. He bought four motorcars in two weeks.

"He did not have enough money to carry out all of his plans without a deficit at the end of the year. The Gillespie protestations and appeals for a simpler life went unheeded."

Finally, the Journal said, Astor asked Miss Gillespie to meet him at his hotel, alone. The friend was quoted as saying:

ASTOR RUDE

"The Gillespies objected to her going alone, and finally compromised by agreeing to allow the meeting to take place in the lobby.

"There was no so-called 'lovers' quarrel,' Astor was rude and insulting. He waved his hands, stuck his hands in his pockets, and said a lot of terrible things."

Among them, the Journal said, was the charge that Mrs. Gillespie had made purchases in a department store and told the clerk:

"Charge them to Mr. Astor. He will pay for them after the marriage."

The truth is, the friend declared, "that Mrs. Gillespie had never done such a thing."

The upshot was a bustup, the Journal continued, and after an exchange of correspondence and the now-famous apology, Miss Gillespie returned the ring. Before it went back, the Gillespies had a jeweler remove the initials of Astor and Miss Gillespie, as well as a Latin phrase meaning:

"Forever faithful."

DERN TO SPIKE DEMANDS FOR FOULOIS EXIT

Congressional Moves For Ouster Called 'Raw Deal'

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—Congressional demands for the immediate removal of Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of the Army Air Corps, may be rejected by Secretary of War Dern, it was learned today.

Although the Secretary declined to make any public comment pending a study of the House Military Affairs subcommittee's report demanding Gen. Foulois' removal, sources close to Dern said he felt the Air Corps chief had been given a "raw deal" by the committee.

Secretary Dern, those close to him said, has never received any evidence to indicate that Gen. Foulois acted otherwise than in the best interests of the military air service.

CALLS ACTION UNJUST

Whether Dern will make a recommendation to President Roosevelt or merely a statement in reply to the subcommittee, was undecided. Dern, it was said, felt that he faced a delicate situation. Although he was understood to feel that the subcommittee had acted somewhat unjustly towards Gen. Foulois, he did not like to act hastily in discarding the recommendation of such a responsible body, especially when the report was unanimous.

However, indications were that the Secretary would come to the defense of Gen. Foulois.

Dern said he understood the committee had sent a copy of the report to the White House as well as to him, adding:

"However, I do not think it advisable to make any public statement until I have had an opportunity to study the report."

After a four-month investigation of the corps the House committee charged Foulois with "mismanagement" and "inefficiency" in his administration of the corps' flying of the air mail. It asked he be relieved for the benefit of "substantial progress in the upbuilding of the moral and the material of the air corps."

MEN LACKED EXPERIENCE

The committee said:

"A glaring example of mismanagement and inefficiency on the part of Foulois is apparent from his actions or failures to act in connection with the plans and preparations prior to the transportation of the air mail."

It charged that Foulois had sanctioned the flying of the mails by Army pilots February 19 without making any preparations and that several of the fliers had as little as 10 hours of night flying time to their credit.

"Testimony showed a total lack of preparations made by the chief and assistant chief, Brig. Gen. Oscar Westover, for the welfare of the personnel engaged in the carrying of the mail."

Westover also testified he would not have permitted the Air Corps to carry the mails.

The air chief issued a statement today in which he said he regretted that the committee elected to hold its hearings in secret and that it has not made public all of the testimony. He said he has no fear "of the ultimate outcome" of any fair and impartial investigation of his office "especially when the facts and conditions are fully known."

THOUSANDS SEE FLEET DEPART

NEW YORK, June 18.—(AP.)—While thousands lined the waterfront streets for a farewell view, the United States fleet headed out to sea today.

Ending an 18-day stay, the ships pulled away from their piers and anchorages—bound for seaports along the Atlantic coast.

The first anchor lifted shortly after dawn. Other departures took place at intervals—the last scheduled at mid-afternoon.

Along the Battery sea wall, 4,000 persons watched the gray ships move seaward. At points overlooking the Hudson River, other crowds assembled, and more at the Navy Yard.

The fleet—visited by 1,400,000 New Yorkers during its stay—was an attraction to the last minute.

Grocers 'Boo!' Johnson But Praise Code

CHICAGO, June 18.—(AP.)—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, drew a chorus of boos today from a disappointed audience waiting for him to address the National Association of Retail Grocers.

Word came indirectly to the association, as it opened its convention here, that Gen. Johnson knew nothing about a speaking appearance scheduled on the meeting's program, but H. C. Person, secretary-manager, declared that the invitation had been plain. He said:

"This is a direct slight. We must express our disapproval of these Mussolini tactics."

Loud boos from the grocers were interrupted by an unidentified member, who charged that in inviting Johnson to speak before Clarence Darrow, author of two reports ripping NRA code administration, the group had attempted to "put Gen. Johnson on the spot."

Praise for one of Gen. Johnson's codes was next on the program after the hubbub over whether he had or hadn't "cut" the meeting. President D. A. Affleck, of Salt Lake City, told the grocers "we are slowly but surely moving into a rising market and better times," and added:

"Forces released by the administration and the NRA to correct social and economic ills are already effective. We must support this movement. We must continue and sustain the administration of the code."

Autoist in Wrong Tube Ties Up Street Cars

In-bound traffic in the South Hills street car tunnels was tied up late yesterday afternoon as Harry Keller, of Elwood City, joined the slim ranks of embarrassed motorists who mistook the trolley tubes for Liberty tubes.

A switchman at the south end of the tunnel, noticing double headlights bouncing over the cross-ties, stopped in-bound traffic.

After several minutes' delay a crowd of curious who had gathered saw a machine with a harrassed looking driver and several passengers emerge from the tunnel, trailed by a string of trolley cars.

Blinking at the sun light, Keller explained:

"I was trying to find Dormont."

A conductor showed him an easier way and Keller, relieved, stepped on the gas.

NEW YORK, June 18.—(AP.)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt suggested to parents today that they ould employ their time in no better way "than in getting to know heir children."

"I think that we are all of us trying to do all we can for our children and to prepare them to live happily in thees days which are characterized by speed and excitement.

LEMON THEFT SUSPECT SHOT

One robbery suspect was in St. Francis Hospital today with a bullet wound in his left leg, as police sought thieves and thugs involved in a series of week-end crimes.

Steve Stocks, 17, of 105 Forty-third and a Half street, was shot by Patrolman Louis Gross near the A. and P. warehouse, Forty-third street, yesterday when he refused to halt at the officer's command, police reported.

Stocks and two companions, who fled when the policeman opened fire, were said to have robbed the warehouse of six crates of lemons.

An alert police dog is credited with the capture of Bernard Cross, 31, of 213 Devilliers street, who faced a hearing today after being held for investigation in the entering of a Webster avenue plumbing shop.

Cross, a Negro, was seized by the dog early yesterday as he fled from the plumbing shop of Maurice Martin, at 1411 Webster avenue, according to police. While the animal's mistress, Miss Dora Cypress, Negro, summoned aid, the dog hung on to the suspect until police arrived.

HOARDING CASE PLEAS DENIED

NEW YORK, June 18.—(AP.)—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals today unanimously denied the appeal of Frederick Barber Campbell, lawyer and capitalist, from a decision of the District Court dismissing his motion to enjoin the United States attorney from prosecuting him for failure to report the holding of gold bullion worth about $200,000.

The Court of Appeals also denied Campbell's appeal from the District Court denial of an order directing the Chase National Bank to surrender the gold to him and refuse its delivery to the government.

The appeal as to failure to report holding of the gold was dismissed on the ground that the court of equity has no authority to enjoin the federal prosecutor from bringing an alleged offender into court for trial unless there shall exist specific conditions which do not appear in the Campbell case.

The appeal as to the bank proceeding was denied without decision as to the legality or constitutionality of the gold hoarding act, on the ground that Campbell should have sued in the state courts to restrain the bank, as he is a citizen of the State of New York and the bank is engaged in business within the state.

Home of Rockefeller's Daughter Restaurant

CHICAGO, June 18.—(AP.)—The Gold Coast mansion of the late Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, where royalty and social luminaries have been guests, will become a public restaurant if the Zoning Board of Appeals grants a Chicago woman's petition. The mansion was given to Mrs. McCormick by her father, John D. Rockefeller, at the time of her marriage to Harold F. McCormick, harvester millionaire.

Friends Seeking $1,500 Bail for 'PicnicCremator'

SHARON, Pa., June 18.—(AP.)—Friends today expressed sympathy for Homer Sanders, charged with involuntary manslaughter in the death of Leah Minerva Dilley, 4, and efforts are being made to raise $1,500 in bail money for his release.

Sanders was locked in the Mercer County Jail at Mercer Saturday after pleading guilty to the charge. Police quote him as saying the little girl entered a vacant house which he was fumigating and died from the fumes.

Fearing arrest for criminal negligence, Sanders, a college graduate, told police he tried to graduate, told police he disposed of the body. They quote him as saying he thrust it into a bonfire.

The girl, who disappeared from the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Dilley, two weeks ago, was found Friday.

Sanders' wife died recently and his home burned not long ago. Police said he told them:

"I guess I must have lost my head. I don't know why I did it. I felt like a hit-and-run driver, afraid to face the police."

CLEVELAND, O., June 18.—(AP.)—Floyd Rankers, Jr., 10, whose story of torturing and drowning a girl of three led to the finding of Peggy Young's body in the Cuyahoga River, will be examined by a psychiatrist today.

Without a trace of emotion the blue-eyed boy told police he took Peggy to a shanty near the river, attempted to attack her and then took her to the river bank and threw her in.

Ex-Actor Sings His First Mass Near Rialto

NEW YORK, June 18.—(AP.)—The Rev. Walter Plimmer, Jr., a former Broadway actor, who was ordained a Roman Catholic priest three weeks ago, celebrated his first mass yesterday in the actors' chapel of St. Malachy's Church, west of Broadway.

In a brief address at the opening of the service, the Rev. Edward P. Leonard, pastor of the church, said "the crazy doings of actors in Hollywood and other asylums have blinded the public to the great number of devout men, priests and even saints who have been actors."

Trixie Friganza and Mr. and Mrs. Pat O'Brien were among the theatrical persons present.

POLICE SEARCH FOR GIRL FAILS

CINCINNATI, June 18.—(AP.)—Police found themselves up against a stone wall last night as 60 hours passed without a tangible clue as to the whereabouts of Bernice Benge, 17-year-old high school student who disappeared from her home in suburban Mount Healthy Friday morning.

Posses under Carson Hoy, Mayor of the village—who also is an assistant prosecutor of Hamilton County—worked through the day. For a time an airplane was employed to aid the search along roads and highways.

Mayor Hoy last night scouted suggestions the girl either had gone very far from home or had killed herself. Articles of Bernice's clothing were found in a nearby wooded section yesterday.

VALLEE BARES PACT WITH FAY

International News Service.

NEW YORK, June 18.—The Supreme Court today was informed by Rudy Vallee that a contract protected him from trouble by his estranged wife, Fay Webb.

The curly-haired crooner came into Supreme Court today to haggle over the terms of their separation agreement.

But the hearing was postponed upon request of Fay's attorneys until June 26 to permit the appellate division to decide on questionable points of the separation agreement.

The kilocycles' number one dream man said he was soon to go to Hollywood to make another picture, and had signed a contract with Fay in which she declares she will not disturb his artistic moods until a court of law referees their marital troubles.

MISSING GIRL FOUND WITH FAKE PRINCE

International News Service.

NEW YORK, June 18.—Louise Krist, 18, who vanished two weeks ago into the shabby wonderland of Greenwich Village in a search for romance, today was found with a false prince who learned his exaggerated gallantry in jail.

Louise and her counterfeit prince charming, who scribbles love lyrics in chicken-track shorthand, were nabbed by Patrolman Gleason as they wandered down the village's lovers' lane—a forlorn stretch of ramshackle tenements.

"Prince" Childe de Rohan D'Harcourt is a dishevelled poet, painter and extortionist who futilely attempts to conceal the march of his 48 years with oddly black hair dye and a lavishly splattered raven moustache with needle points.

PROTESTS SEIZURE

He angrily protested when Gleason suggested they travel to the station house, shaking his gold-tipped cane and beseeching the benevolent gods of ancient Greece to punish Gleason by banishing him to a bicycle post on Staten Island.

Louise, for whom detectives have been combing America's Latin quarter, said D'Harcourt was a Francois Villon, misunderstood, hounded by police, badgered by destiny and a football of the gods.

In the station house they revealed the "prince's" castle was a dim, narrow and shabby room in a Broadway theatrical hotel.

VOWS LOVE

The odd lovers, clasped in a murmuring huddle while flashlights flared in the rear room of the precinct house, vowed eternal love in some excursion-rate paradise (the "prince" had only 48 cents), where poets could waste the day in happiness.

Said Louise, between noisy kisses:

"I love you. I love you. No one will take you from me."

Her father, Otto, a former classmate of Fritz Kreisler, and who plays 'cello in a well-known restaurant, rushed to her side.

He said in a tear-choked voice:

"Ach. Do not say that."

The "prince" turned to reporters. He said in his oddly accented and purring voice:

"Ain't this a terrible spot for a guy to be in?"

19 POST BOND IN FIGHT RAID

BUTLER, Pa., June 18.—Nineteen persons are facing hearings before an alderman here tonight following a raid on one of the biggest cock fights ever staged in Butler County.

More than 100 spectators escaped when the raiders swooped down on the fights at an isolated spot in a forest near Annandale.

Eight dead game cocks strewn on the ground furnished the officers mute evidence of the furious fighting that had aroused the emotions of the throng.

In addition the raiders confiscated 32 live game cocks, sets of spurs and scales.

The raid was made at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Those arrested posted $20 forfeit each for their appearance before Alderman E. P. Pfeffer, of Butler.

LOVE AT SIGHT, BLIND PAIR WED

NEW YORK, June 18.—(AP.)—Brown-eyed Nadine A. Beling has never seen her young husband, Jerry Cloud, and probably never will, but that did not stop their marriage.

In fact Miss Beling, who became Mrs. Cloud in a civil ceremony at the municipal building, insisted today it was a case of love at first sight—her pet joke almost from the time she met her husband at a dance for the blind two months ago. She is 23; he 24. Cloud said:

"Nadine danced divinely. I danced with her all evening and we fell in love. I kept pestering her until she promised to marry me."

The marital aura surrounding the Cloud family extended as far west at Chicago, Cloud said, where his sister, Mrs. F. D. Watson, was married Saturday almost at the same time.

American Ordained As Buddhist Priest

NUDE BATHERS SET TOWN AGOG

HAMDEN, Conn., June 18.—(AP.)—This town was all agog last night on the eve of its first nude bathing case.

Three Adamses and an Eve who said they were Julian Ashton Ripley, Jr., 26, of Hamden and Oyster Bay, N. Y., his wife Barbara, 24, Charles Van Wick Brooks, 32, of Westport, Conn., and his brother, Oliver, 18, are to be arraigned in the Hamden town court today on a charge of nude bathing in a water supply and trespass.

They were taken into custody Saturday and released under bonds of $50 each pending arraignment.

Police said:

"They seemed to think it was quite a joke."

Ripley is described in the Yale directory as a Sterling research fellow in social science, bachelor of arts, Yale, 1930; master of arts, Harvard, 1932, and doctor of philosophy, University of Virginia, 1933.

Charles Van Wick Brooks said he was a writer.

JUDGE DOFFS WIG--TOO HOT

LONDON, June 18.—(AP.)—It is all most unusual—even irregular.

Lord Merrivale, that famous judge, actually discarded his wig in court today. The most dignified police in the world, as represented by the bobbies at Rochester, discarded their tunics and directed traffic in their shirtsleeves.

As England steamed through another humid day with no rain in sight to relieve the country-wide drought, 500 police armed with birch brooms guarded the Ascot heath and race course from the danger of fire.

At 1 p. m. the temperature in London was 81 degrees in the shade, one degree higher than yesterday.

Impersonator Slain, Amity Inquiry Hints

WASHINGTON, Pa., June 18.—(INS.)—Police were confident today the results of an autopsy would give them some clue as to how George T. Manis, 23, well-known female impersonator, whose body was found on a farm near Amity, met death. Officers believe the youth was slain. Indications were that the body had been dragged along the road to its resting place.

Two Jewish Policemen Act as Bodyguard For Hitler Aide

By DAVID P. SENTNER

International News Service.

BOSTON, June 18.—All was quiet on the Hanfstaengl front today—so far.

While Chancellor Adolf Hitler, of Germany, strummed the strings of history without benefit of his favorite musician, Dr. Ernst Franz Sedgwick Hanfstaengl, the latter renewed his sentimental memories of old Harvard days and led his police bodyguard a merry chase.

The bodyguard, including two Jewish police officers, saw no signs of any anti-Nazi demonstrators. Their main difficulty was to keeping up with the rugged six-foot-plus alumnus of the Harvard class of 1909.

He flitted incognito from the residence of one old classmate to another.

He spent the night at the home of Louis A. Shaw in Beverly Farms and went for a swim early this morning.

Dr. Hanfstaengl will attend memorial services for Norman Prince, member of the Lafayette Escadrille, who was shot down in France during the World War and for Nathaniel Simpkins, who died of influenza during the war. Both were members of Hanfstaengl's class.

MAY SEE ROOSEVELT

The chief of the foreign press section of the National Socialist party in Germany continued to decline to discuss political matters.

If the opportunity presents itself, Dr. Hanfstaengl said he would like to meet President Roosevelt.

He put the matter quaintly, after he was asked if he would meet the President, also a Harvard graduate, at the Yale-Harvard boat race at New London later in the week. He replied:

"If you were parched with thirst and you saw a big bottle of beer, would you drink it?"

Had he been drinking any American beer?

No, he preferred American gin, He chuckled.

FROM GIN TO MUSIC

The interview jumped from gin to jazz music. The Herr doctor was decidedly against jazz music. He spoke up emphatically for Wagner, Chopin and Schumann.

But he was enthusiastic about American baseball. He spoke of the big league game he witnessed like no sports writer ever wrote:

"I saw the agonies of the pitcher and the sardonic satisfaction of the catcher. They were batting balls, cutting around corners at great speed and everybody was having a good time."

At the home of Dr. Elliott C. Cutler, prominent Boston physician, and a classmate "Hanfy" tried his hand at batting a baseball with a hickory stick. The young sons of Dr. Cutler acted as the battery. "Hanfy" took 12 wallops at the air before he finally tipped one a few dozen feet.

Asked about the Jewish question in Germany, he replied:

"The less you talk about the Jews the better it will be for the Jews and the whole Jewish question."

TALKS OF HITLER

When it was brought to his attention that his appearance in the United States to attend the twenty-fifth reunion of his Harvard class had aroused some controversy Dr. Hanfstaengl said:

"Americans are like a lot of children. Children are hard to please. But you can't fool a child."

Night Club Girl Causes Hanfstaengl to Miss Train

NEW YORK, June 18.—(AP.)—The reason Dr. Ernest Franz Sedgwick Hanfstaengl, musically inclined aide of Chancellor Hitler, missed his train to Boston was revealed today as a pretty, 21-year-old night club entertainer who entranced him for almost four hours with deft renditions of Strauss waltzes.

She is Olive Jones, daughter of Fred Jones, of Columbus, O., who arrived in New York last September with but $75 in her purse to last until she found a job.

"A decided talent," said Dr. Hanfstaengl, who had expressed a desire to see a night club before entraining Saturday night for Harvard and Boston to attend a reunion of his class. So he was taken to the Stork Club.

Beguiled by the piano playing of Miss Jones, he strolled to the piano, leaned over the instrument with obvious pleasure, unmindful of several hundred guests who had come there to hear jazz—not Strauss waltzes.

Broadway Wants Libby's Name in Big Lights

By WILLIAM P. REED

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, June 18.—Broadway, street of mugs and moochers, wants its Libby Holman back.

Convinced by a preview of the new Libby in Hedgerow, Pa., on Saturday that the Holman still has what it takes, the Midway of Manhattan jittered around today trying to pick a spot for the big-time comeback of the erstwhile torch-chanter who dropped the blues for the group theater.

The glamorous widow of Smith Reynolds, young tobacco millionaire mysteriously slain more than a year ago in his palatial North Carolina home, remained in seclusion today, unwilling to discuss the ovation she received—five curtain calls—in her first legitimate role.

But Broadway, street of fables and phoneys, yearned for her name in the thousand-watt bulbs. Because Broadway, where they roll 'em in the aisles with second-raters, can't stand the thought that Hedgerow, where Libby is to appear in several more plays, has only 168 seats in its little group theater.

Libby's amazingly successful though modest performance in "Spring in Autumn" as a member of Jasper Deeter's theatrical school, merely underlined Broadway's advance knowledge that the girl has both heart and head.

Girl Found Unconscious In Hotel, 2 Held

Two employes of the Strand Hotel, Sixth street, faced hearings today on charges of keeping a disorderly house, following the discovery of a 17-year-old girl unconscious on the floor of a room in the hotel.

Goodie Sulkin, 34, and Louis Shuffer, 38, clerks at the hotel, were held by police after reporting finding the girl, who gave her name as Stesonia Golobich, of 5418½ Dresden way. They were released on $100 bond.

Police said she could not explain her presence in the place, but charged that three men in a machine seized her as she was walking near the south end of the Liberty Tubes, Saturday night, forced her into their car and drove to the vicinity of Millvale, where they attacked her.

Taken to Allegheny General Hospital, she was revived and treated for bruises and scratches on her body and face. Doctors said she appeared to have been drugged. Police are searching for her abductors.

Flying to Wed

LAURA La PLANTE

WAITING WINS FILM ACTRESS

By WILLIAM PARKER
International News Service.

PARIS, June 18.—Laura La-Plante, blonde beauty of the films, flew to Paris today to marry the man who had "loved and waited," Irving Asher, European production agent of one of the leading American motion picture firms.

The marriage, it was announced, will take place tomorrow. French law requires that marriage banns be posted three weeks in advance of the ceremony and no such notice is on record, but evidently love expected to find a way around this technicality.

Miss LaPlante, recently divorced at Riga, Latvia, from William C. Seiter, film producer, arrived by airplane from London. She was accompanied by James J. Walker, former Mayor of New York, and his wife the former Betty Compton, actress.

HEIRESS READY TO FAN DANCE

Universal Service.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 18.—She would "do a fan dance if necessary," Mrs. Natalie Hutchinson Tyson, socially prominent granddaughter and heiress of E. T. Stotesbury, Philadelphia financier, declared today as she announced her plans of trying for a career on the silver screen "largely for a thrill." She added:

"My family's objections to my film career weren't particularly strenuous, because they don't think I'll get anywhere."

PILOT TELLS OF FLIGHT PLANS

Lieut. Felix Vaitkus, United States Army pilot, who plans to fly from New York to Lithuania in July, yesterday gave a demonstration at Bettis Field, using the Lockheed plane which he will use in the flight.

The young officer said it is possible he may be accompanied on the flight by his bride, whom he married in Kohler, Wis., two weeks ago. Mrs. Vaitkus said she was determined to accompany her husband.

In discussing the flight with the officer, Mayor McNair told him:

"Tell your friends to build in Pittsburgh, where the buildings are taxed only at half rate. And don't run out of gas half way across the ocean."

Vaitkus plans to fly at an altitude of 10,000 feet or more, and to carry 700 gallons of gas.

ant, against the Christian Scientist.

It is respectfully suggested by this writer, who believes in old-fashioned science, and not in Christian Science, that the trial in question suggests the ancient time of Haroun Al Raschid rather than a modern American court.

Suppose an ordinary Christian, not a Christian Scientist, had appeared as plaintiff against a man, saying:

"This man struck me on the side of the head, knocked me down, and compelled me to give him all my money. I want him punished, and I want damages."

Would the justice have said to the plaintiff:

"You call yourself Christian; don't you know that Christianity teaches you, if you are struck on one cheek, to turn the other cheek; did you do that? Don't you know that your Christian religion commands you to take all you have and give to the poor? Is it not evident that this highwayman was poor? If you were a sincere Christian, you would have turned the other cheek, to be knocked down again, and would have given him what money you had at home, as well as what you had with you. You have no standing in this court, because you call yourself a Christian and don't turn the other cheek, and don't take all you have and give to the poor."

The case should be taken to some higher court, in which the plaintiff might find that a particular religious belief, sound or otherwise, does not deprive her of justice under ordinary American law.

FRENCH NEWSPAPERS and statesmen fear that Mussolini has had the international wool pulled over his eyes by the ingenious Hitler. According to the forceful Doumergue, and others, France goes to war only when forced to do so, loves fights only when compelled. Germans, on the other hand, love war for its own sake, and plan it in advance. So say the French.

There is no doubt that France, England and to a lesser extent Italy, want no war at present. After a big war when nations have divided the property of the conquered, they are somewhat in the condition of a python that has swallowed a small donkey. They want time to lie and digest, in peace.

In comparatively recent French history, that of Napoleon and Louis the Fourteenth, for instance, there has been no pronounced objection to making war for its own sake, and for the sake of conquest.

FRANCE RESPONDS in a common-sense way to the alarm caused by the meeting and secret conversation between Hitler and Mussolini. The deputies appropriate three thousand million francs, to build new fighting airplanes, submarines and other weapons of defense, in spite of a money stringency, and hard times in France.

If the French are ever defeated again, as in 1871, it will not be because of being taken by surprise.

BISHOP CANNON FLAYS MELLON

SUFFOLK, Va., June 18.—(AP.)—Bishop James Cannon, Jr., militant dry, ascribed the defeat of prohibition to "Andrew Mellon, a brewer;" drew a drab picture of conditions under repeal, and criticized the "wet press" and open saloon in an address before an audience of several hundred people yesterday at the Glenlake Park tabernacle.

Bishop Cannon also made the statement that President Roosevelt had expressed himself as opposed to the open saloon and had signed, 14 days later, a bill giving the open saloon to the District of Columbia.

Repeal of prohibition, Bishop Cannon said, has increased drunkenness and crime and more than doubled the toll of death by automobile accidents through encouraging drunken driving, and the entire situation is such, he said, that "even the wet newspapers and leaders of the wet party are appalled at the situation in which the country sees itself with regard to drunkenness and crime."

NOW THAT ALL THREE COST THE SAME

MERIT ALONE SHOULD GUIDE YOUR CHOICE

ON JUNE 5th, Plymouth substantially reduced prices from $10 to $45. Do you realize what this means? It means that TODAY the prices of "ALL THREE" low-priced cars are virtually the same.

True, in some models Plymouth lists for a few dollars more. But then, in other models, it costs less.

When a new Plymouth is delivered to your door, the chances are that it will not have cost you any more than the comparable model of any other car on the market.

It is easy to see why this is so important. It means that price is no longer a factor in choosing your car. It means that you can compare engineering values... fairly and squarely. Merit alone should guide your choice.

And when you do this what do you find? You find that Plymouth has Hydraulic Brakes and a Safety-Steel Body ... the two greatest safeguards any car can have.

You find that Plymouth has patented Floating Power engine mountings plus Individual Wheel (knee-type) Springing ... to guarantee your comfort every mile you drive.

Each of Plymouth's competitors offers you just one of these features. Plymouth not only gives you all four, but many other engineering advantages.

In a few days, Plymouth will announce the new SPECIAL SIX. Most dealers in this city now have this car. They will be glad to give you a preview.

No matter how loyal you are to your present car, see this SPECIAL SIX before you make a new-car deposit. Any Dodge, De Soto or Chrysler dealer will demonstrate.

LANT OFFERED BY WATER FIRM

City Council in a letter from e City Law Department today as asked for authority to get a ice quoted on the entire plant the South Pittsburgh Water ompany.

The law department informed ouncil the company is willing to ll its entire plant on a five-year tion during whic ltime a defi- te price for the property would determined by engineers. The mpany is unwilling to sell only at part of its plant situated in e city.

The book value of the water mpany's plant is reported to somewhere in the neighbor- od of $13,000,000. It is believed e city has the right to go into e water busines outside its own oundaries, and that the problem ould be largely one of financing. An investment of $10,000,000 ould be more than the present uncilmanic borrowing margin. owever, it is believed that the ant, if purchased, could be nded separately and financed ht of income.

Such an arrangement would not nstitute a charge against the ty's purchasing power.

The purchase, if made, would t rid of the heavy payments ade by the city to the water ompany, representing the dif- rence between city and company ates in the South Hills wards. he property would lend itself consolidation with the city ater system.

Consumers outside the city ight be billed in the same way hat the city now charges a num- er of wholesale purchasers of ity water.

VILLEFRANCHE, France, June 8.—Peggy Hopkins Joyce, much-married former New York actress, disembarked indignantly today rom the liner Conte di Savoia nd announced:

"Who's she? I never heard of her."

NAVAL PARLEY HELD KEY TO ARMS PACT

LONDON, June 18.—(AP.)—The conviction that the world's hopes for disarmament or limitation of armaments are now pinned primarily on next year's Naval Conference dominates the Anglo-American naval conversations which began today with a two-hour session at No. 10 Downing street.

It was stated authoritatively that both the Americans and the British virtually despair of any agreement at Geneva unless the naval powers set an example.

Even the Franco-German impasse is regarded as being overshadowed by the death-dealing reservations made by Japan to the security disarmament proposals at Geneva. It was regarded here as imposible that either the United States or Russia will make arms commitments unless Japan does likewise. The only chance of Japanese co-operation is expected at the Naval Conference, now that she has vetoed the most important Geneva proposals.

BRIGHTER PROSPECT

Brighter prospects for the naval parley were seen in more active participation by the United States than was the case at Geneva. A strong formal appeal by President Roosevelt is expected in British political circles to start the conference off with a bang. It is expected here to be much stronger that either of the two personal appeals the President made to Geneva since he took office.

At the close of today's session it was announced the conferees would meet again Wednesday morning.

U. S. DELEGATION

The American delegation today included Norman H. Davis, ambassador-at-large; Robert W. Bingham, ambassador to Great Britain; Rear Admiral Richard H. Leigh, naval advisor, and Ray Atherton, of the American Embassy. They conferred with Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald, Sir Bolton Eyres-Monsell, first lord of the Admiralty; Rear Admiral Charles J. C. Little, deputy chief of the naval staff, and Robert L. Craigie, of the Foreign Office.

Although there are already strong unofficial intimations that the parley next year will be held in London, the place and time will have to be settled upon formally.

Diplomatic circles professed to see a possible change in Japan's view toward London as a site. Although previously Tokio had privately approved London, there was a belief in some quarters that Japan now believes the conference should be held in a neutral city, possibly the Hague or Brussels.

Oil Wells Ablaze, Village Menaced

BRADFORD, Pa., June 18.—(AP.)—More than 250 men today battled an oil fire that converted Spring Run Creek into a stream of fire and for a time threatened the village of Cyclone.

Two oil wells and two tanks were destroyed. Volunteer fire fighters saved 14 other tanks.

London-Bound

MARTHA "MICKEY" DEVINE

'MICKEY' LANDS IN LONDON

Universal Service.

LONDON, June 18.—Martha (Mickey) Devine, Broadway showgirl whose name frequently has been linked with that of Horace E. Dodge, millionaire American boat builder, will arrive in London today for an indefinite stay at the home of friends near Dodge's Windsor estate, it was disclosed today.

Dodge, who arrived last week with his two children, denied knowing anything of Mickey's whereabouts. The name of the showgirl was mentioned with that of the millionaire when Mrs. Muriel Sisman Dodge filed suit for divorce in Detroit predicting her husband would eventually marry the showgirl. No decision was ever handed down on the Detroit suit.

Dodge also insisted he has no plans for filing a divorce suit against Mrs. Dodge, who is now understood to be in Philadelphia.

Dodge denied reports that his brother and step-father, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Dillman, opposed his separation from Muriel. He said his mother did not wish to see them separated, but finally admitted it was the only course for them to follow. He added that from the first, Dillman favored the separation.

FRENCH GRAB GUNS IN NEW WAR SCARE

By SEYMOUR BERKSON
Universal Service.

PARIS, June 18.—The ominous warning of a French military expert, Paul Darcy, that "by the summer of 1935 the German Army will be ready" today threw a new war scare into France.

On all sides, except from radicals, the cry went up for more armaments, and French officialdom, quick to respond to popular opinion, has answered with an increase of military appropriations to a peak of nearly $2,000,000,000 for 1934.

Gen. De Cugnac declared that "war is probable and is most likely to begin by a bruscue attack from Germany." He added:

"Our only hope in this grave hour consists in being very powerful. Certainly in Berlin a secret dossier of France's military preparations is being kept. If this dossier is full and we appear perfectly prepared, Germany would not commit the folly of attacking us.

"It is necessary that our frontiers are constantly manned with fully armed troops. We must watch our battlements. We cannot rely on passive defense. Our reserves must be ready to bar the path to the invader no matter which path of invasion be chosen."

Darcey declared that while Hitler's militiamen have not yet obtained all the arms they want, the German factories are so mobilized as to "permit the most rapid delivery of all necessary materials when the occasion arises."

Franco-Russian Alliance Fear Laid to Germany

PARIS, June 18.—(AP.)—German fear of a Franco-Russian alliance was credited in official circles today for Chancellor Hitler's trip to Venice and the secret visit here of Joachim von Ribbentrop, special German disarmament commissioner.

Reliable sources said Von Ribbentrop got "little satisfaction" from his conference here Saturday with Louis Barthou, French Foreign Minister, who insisted that the reich "come back to Geneva."

Barthou pressed on with his program of building up European defensive alliances for France, designed to "place a fence" around Germany.

Berlin was represented as being alarmed at reports that France and Russia were drawing together and that Russia is on the threshold of entrance to Geneva.

Navy Commissions 'Modern' Destroyer

BOSTON, June 18.—(AP.)—The first new type destroyer completed since the World War building program, the Farragut, was officially put into active duty today at the Charlestown Navy Yard. Rear Admiral Henry H. Hough read the commission orders from Washington.

The destroyer, which was recently completed at the Fore River shipyard, will be under the command of Elliot Buckmaster.

15 Dead in Cuba As Machine Guns Sweep Paraders

HAVANA, June 18.—(AP.)—Retaliation by infuriated members of the ABC Society was feared today after Cuba's "bloody Sunday," in which 15 persons were killed and nearly 60 wounded.

A heavy guard was placed around the Emergency Hospital upon reports that the ABC planned to storm it and wreak vengeance on four wounded men.

Deep political significance was attached to the two days of rioting, culminating yesterday in a parade that was turned suddenly into a slaughter. They appeared likely to bring a postponement of the government's plan to hold general elections in December.

Guerilla warfare, carried on intermittently for months, reached a climax when 50,000 members of the A B C Society, a powerful political organization, marched through the principal streets, the big moment of a two-day fiesta enemies had sworn to break up.

When the marchers reached the intersection of Neptuno street along the fashionable Prado boulevard, the music of brass bands was interrupted by the deadly clatter of machine guns.

The attack by enemies of the society came as a complete surprise. A shrill whistle sounded, and then shots whizzed into the bulevard from side streets. A number of marchers, including several women, fell, dead or dying.

Thousands of bystanders watching the parade were thrown into a panic and trampled one another as they rushed for shelter.

POLAND HONORS SLAIN HERO

WARSAW, June 18.—(AP.)—Official Poland today paid its last respects to Bronislaw Pieracki, minister of the interior who was murdered June 15 by an assassin still believed to be at large.

The ceremony was one of the most impressive seen in Warsaw in many years.

The body of Pieracki, who was beloved as a war hero as well as a statesman, was dressed in the uniform of a general and lay in state in the Catholic cathedral.

Plane Factory Fire Hints Sabotage Plot

BERLIN, June 18.—(INS.)—The huge Heinkel airplane factory at Breitling, on the Baltic seashore, was damaged by fire today, according to word received here. A number of airplanes were burned.

The police are investigating the possibility the fire may have been incendiary. The factory recently has been engaged in building airplanes at capacity and several new model planes were scheduled for trial flights today. Some of these planes were among those destroyed.

NAZIS MUZZLE CENSURE BY VON PAPEN

BERLIN, June 18.—(AP.)—The boldest public criticism of the Nazi regime which has come from anyone in authority since Chancellor Hitler's assumption of power in January, 1933, was made yesterday by Franz Von Papen, vice chancellor and premier of Prussia.

The amazing character of his remarks, delivered before students of Marburg University, is best illustrated by the fact that no Berlin newspapers printed even an excerpt. Von Papen in guarded language pleaded for the re-establishment of the monarchy.

Notice was served by the government-controlled German News Bureau upon its subscribers that the speech must not be published in Germany.

Von Papen, a Hitler "right-hand man," challenged the Nazi regime's claims that it must impose its will in the realm of religion and severely criticized muzzling of the press.

Von Papen warned against Radical Socialist experiments, asserting they held the possibility of a new class war.

Excessive use of slogans and the belief that the people might be united by terrorism were denounced by the vice chancellor, who also serves as minister of air.

He criticized the attempt to have one political party rule Germany, instead of making the new Germany "the real people's state."

REPLY TO U. S. ON DEBTS NEAR

LONDON, June 18.—(AP.)—Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald announced in the House of Commons today that the British government proposes to reply to the United States war debt note regarding the American suggestion that Great Britain make a payment "in kind"—that is, in goods and services.

The question about Bermuda was asked by Capt. Arthur Evens, Conservative. Following the Prime Minister's reply, John Lawson, Laborite, asked caustically:

"Can the government give any guarantee the British Empire will be left intact at the time of the next general election?"

The Prime Minister returned:

"My honorable friend need be under no delusion on that matter."

Duke of Wellington, Fourth of Line, Dies

BASINGSTOKE, England, June 18.—(INS.)—On the one hundred and nineteenth anniversary of the great victory of the founder of his duchy at Waterloo, Arthur Charles Wellesley, 85, the fourth Duke of Wellington, died today. He succeeded his brother, Henry, as Duke of Wellington in 1900.

DAX KILLINGS CHARGED TO PLOTTERS

NEW YORK, June 18.—(AP.)—Seven persons were under arrest today in a police roundup of an alleged extortion gang which specialized in staging fake murders—using tomato ketchup to represent blood.

Nine men and two women were being held as investigation was made of the gang's activities in New York, Philadelphia and New Jersey. The police said the troupe had collected more than $100,000 in the last year by a wide variety of plots.

The arrests followed a complaint by Dominick Zerboni, a junk dealer, who said he had paid $2,000 to the gang after he had been made the victim in a fake murder plot. He told police he had been approached several months ago by two men who demanded a monthly sum for the "protection" of his business.

TALKS TO 'BOSS'

When he refused, the pair took him to an East Side tenement to talk to the "boss."

As he talked to the "boss," Zerboni said, an argument started and somebody fired a "shot." The "boss" fell to the ground and when others turned him over his face was covered with what seemed to be blood and there was a crimson spot on the ground. Soon afterward two men displaying badges came up to the scene and Zerboni was pointed to as the murderer."

Zerboni said the men with badges told him they would set him free if he paid $3,000. He managed to pay $2,000 but when the "detectives" demanded more, Zerboni went to the police. A trap was laid, under which Zerboni continued to bargain with the pair, and yesterday two men were arrested. Later the police took four other men and two women into custody and arrested three more men today.

FAKE EXPLAINED

Police said the fake murder was staged by means of a blank cartridge and a bottle of ketchup. They said that in another plot when the victim was not convinced a "murder" had taken place, members of the gang took him to a room where the "murdered" man was lying in a coffin.

Those held said they were Pietro Niccolato, 35; Guiseppe Perrone, 36; James Longo, 39; his wife, Lucy, 23; Mrs. Alvira Bove, 34; Amello Locardo, 45; Jack Rosenberg, 27; Joseph Bonigiano, 27; Sebastian De Losare, 49; Carmello Scuddere, 39, all of New York, and Luca Canale, 21, of Port Washington, N. Y.

The storm came in from the Gulf of Mexico Saturday, swept through Southeast Louisana, invaded Mississippi with great damage and then blew out its wrath in squalls in the Memphis (Tenn.) area.

Luisiana State University farm officials estimated that the hurricane had damaged crops to the extent of several millions of dollars in this state.

Buy a Sandwich And See Sunday Movie Free

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 18.—(AP.)—The Sunday "sandwich-movie" made its appearance on Main street today and, although the theater manager was arrested on a charge of violating a Tennessee "blue law" prohibiting shows on Sunday, a good time was had by all, even the police.

The rain came down in torrents, but the crowds came down in autos, taxicabs and street cars and afoot to pay 40 cents for a sandwich and a cold drink, and see a first-run picture free of charge. It was the first attempt here in several years to open a theater on Sunday except in the name of charity.

After the patrons came Inspector Joseph Hewitt, of the police department.

WELFARE AIMS, NEEDS TOLD

Refusal of men drafted for relief work employment to accept the jobs offered them is frequently due to an attitude of rebellion and bitterness toward society, according to Charles Oliver, chairman of the Community Fund 1934 campaign.

Oliver today stressed the need of welfare agencies, privately supported, as a means of combating moral and social disintegration among the unemployed. He said:

"Through its four family welfare units, the Family Society, the Jewish Family Welfare Association, the Family Department of the Conference of Catholic Charities and the Red Cross, the Community Fund is attempting to meet its responsibility—of keeping normal, or rebuilding the health, character and mental attitude of families hit hard by the depression."

CAR FATALITIES FEWER HERE

Although automobile fatalities throughout the country increased 17 per cent during the first four months of 1934, Pittsburgh is one of the few places which reported a decrease, the Western Pennsylvania division of the National Safety Council reported today.

George Clarkson, manager of the Western Pennsylvania division, said numerous fatalities could have been prevented if motorists would carry first aid kits and apply emergency treatment at the scenes of accidents.

Mass Output Aids Britain's Comeback

(Editor's note—Great Britain has learned mass production and is outdoing the Germans in that regard, H. R. Knickerbocker, foreign correspondent of International News Service, writes in the seventh article of his series on British recovery.)

SHEFFIELD, June 18.—"Britain cannot recover because costs are too high." Thus ran the forecast of Britain's future.

But is Britain recovering?

Regard Sheffield:

Twenty-five million articles a year are today being turned out by the machines of "Quantity, Ltd." in this city. The sum of a year's sales is around $2,500,000. Average cost per article is therefore 10 cents.

This is the new Sheffield. New Sheffield has learned mass production. "Quantity, Ltd." mikes 1,200 gross, 8,685,500 spoons and forks a week, but they make only two patterns.

New Sheffield has beaten the Germans. "Quantity, Ltd." exports to Germany, fatherland of cheap production.

Old Sheffield is just around the corner. Four objects tell its story. One of them is a steam engine that has been pumping water for over 100 years and is still pumping water. It is in the Elsecar Colliery not far from here. A man named Thomas Newcomen invented it. That was some time ago.

AFTER 100 YEARS

It was so long ago that James Watt had time to study Newcomen's engine and to improve upon it, and thereby win the title of inventor of the steam engine in 1769. His improvement helped bring several hundred million people into the world during the course of the next five generations. Probably only a fraction of us now living would be here had it not been for the industrial revolution.

That was important enough to obscure the fame of Mr. Newcomen. But consider the quality of an engine that is still doing useful work after 100 years.

Old Sheffield built for quality. Number two exhibit is the engine that still supplies all the power in the firm of "John Quality and Sons." Men who were boys in America 20 years ago would remember "John Quality's" trademark on their pocketknives. Their grandfathers would remember it still better, for "Quality" founded 149 years ago, began selling knives in America in 1830.

It was an old trademark in America when the Civil War broke out. It survived every vicissitude of trade tariffs. "John Quality" closed their New York office last year.

A VETERAN SPEAKS

They have not closed shop at home. The old plant is still going, and it is going on power generated by a Corliss valve steam engine built in 1882 and clattering away today exactly as it did fifty-two years ago.

Exhibits three and four of old Sheffield are named respectively Wilfred Cooper and Fred Smith. Wilfred works for "John Quality and Sons." He has been working there for 71 years. Wilfred is 83. He went to work when he was 12.

"And it ain't because I'm a teetotaler either," chuckled Wilfred as he thrust a knife blade in the tempering furnace. "Only I ask for a glass and not for a pint. One glass's enough for me." The director remarked:

"Your father worked here, too, didn't he?"

"Yes, yes, but he drank."

The director suggested:

"A bit."

"No, not a bit, he drank . . ." and the old man put his hands to his waist as though to hold in his merriment, then exploded: "A lot." We left him still laughing as he pumped the bellows of his furnace.

GO TO WORK AT 14

Winding, dark and century-old passages led us to Fred Smith. But Fred, polishing blades, is just a youngster. He is only 79. He has been working for "Quality" for 65 years.

They forged a blade for me. A boy of fifty-one did it with a hammer. Incredible the skill with which he fashioned the blade. Precisely as they did it 100 years ago. Finished, hand ground, hand polished, it would have no superior in quality in the world. That is old Sheffield.

But it takes old Sheffield 30 minutes to forge a carving knife by hand. It takes new Sheffield less than a minute by machine.

Old Sheffield paid a 10 per cent dividend from 1876 to 1922. Their next profit was in 1929. Then none at all until 1933. Capacity for their plant would be 1,000 workmen. The last time they worked at capacity was in 1894. Today they employ 300 workmen.

Wages of their master cutlers are a minimum of $25 a week.

New Sheffield hires girls. Fifteen hundred work people populate the plant of "Quantity Ltd." Seventy-five per cent of them are women and girls. They go to work at 14.

SELL AT HOME, ABROAD

In a line of them standing over buffing machines one small figure seemed improbably young. But she was 14, legal age. Her wage was $2 a week.

"What is the real difference," I asked the director of "John Quality and Sons," between grinding a blade by hand and grinding it by machine? Is it really worth the price?" The director said:

"A machine expects every blade to be exactly alike. A man knows that no two blades are ever exactly alike."

"Quantity Ltd." is working six hours a week overtime and it is constantly behind on orders. It sells at home and abroad. So cheap are its prices that tariffs constitute little hindrance. To France, Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Switzerland, to South Africa, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, go its products, packed by the gross, produced in mass and sold in mass.

They are not the most popular firm in Sheffield. They were only founded 33 years ago but already they produce more table cutlery than the next six firms in Sheffield put together.

Since 1929 they have increased one-third in size. They turn out trainloads of silverware. They carry a stock of 500,000 ounces of silver. All of their employes have to hump to keep up with the machines. Not all of them seem to like it. Only the girls in the silverware department sang a jazz tune as they hammered silver teapots.

"Quantity Ltd." is opening a new scissors factory. The Germans used to have a monopoly on the market for cheap scissors. "Quality" will stamp out a dozen scissors in the time it would take old Sheffield to forge one pair by hand.

The profits of "Quality Ltd." have increased every year. Recovery year is just another better year for "Quality Ltd."

For "John Quality and Sons" 1933 meant the first profit in five years. This year will mean a few more gross of orders. For "Quality Ltd" it will mean another shipload.

Old Sheffield and new are proof of Britain's come-back. New Sheffield has demonstrated that the oldest British industry can learn the latest lessons. Despite the prophets, some British industries have cut their costs. The Ashington Coal Mines, the United Steel Companies plant, the cheap mass production of "Quality Ltd." may still be exceptions, but they show the way. To this increase of technical efficiency no small part of British recovery is due.

Not all British industry has gone this path. What of textiles, the cotton trade, next to coal the largest employer of labor in Britain? Can Lancashire come back?

MOTHER-IN-LAW SETTLES POST

SAN FRANCISCO, June 18.—(AP.)—A 90-year-old mother-in-law played a part in helping to give to the membership of the Federal Power Commission a man noted as a champion of the consumer in utility rate battles, it was revealed here.

The story came to light simultaneously with the United States Senate's confirmation of Clyde L. Seavey as a member of the Power Commission by appointment of President Roosevelt.

Months ago the vacant position on the Federal Power Commission was offered to Seavey, friend of Senator Hiram Johnson and president of the State Railroad Commission, the California utility regulatory body. Seavey rejected the offer for "personal reasons."

Subsequently it became known a big factor in the "personal reasons" was Seavey's consideration for his 90-year-old mother-in-law.

Eventually the mother-in-law, Mrs. Jane Follett, heard about it. She went straight to Mrs. Seavey. She said:

"I will be real angry with Clyde if he doesn't accept the position. Besides, I've never seen Washington and I would like to live there a while. I'm only 90 years old, and I'm not dead yet."

Model Builders' Course for Beginners
Lesson No. 10, Rudder and Motor Stick

By LAWRENCE SHAW
National Director

In Lesson Number Nine in our course we started the construction of the all-Balsa low wing flier, our first flying model. We already have finished the wing, with its two-inch dihedral, and the stabilizer (or elevator.)

Now we are ready to make the rudder, motor stick and wheels and thus finish the balsa parts of the plane, with the exception of the propeller for which a special lesson will be published on Wednesday.

The rudder is made from the piece of 1-32 x 2 inch Balsa we had left over after cutting the stabilizer out. The rudder is the upright part of the tail unit and, as you undoubtedly know, in a real plane gives the craft its left or right direction.

The rudder for this low-wing flier is three and one-half inches high in the back, two and one-half inches across the bottom. It is three and one-eighth inches high in the front and one and one-quarter inches across the top the front of the rudder, tapers upward three-quarters of an inch towards the back, just as in our glider model.

Along the top of the rudder we have another taper. This is a quarter of an inch towards the front and downward. You also had this taper in your glider rudder. Next sandpaper your rudder c. refully and set it aside until we are ready for the assembly of the various units.

Motor Stick Easy to Make

The motor stick for this low-wing flier is much easier to make than even the one for the glider, for this motor stick has no taper at all. We merely take our 3-16x¼x15-inch balsa "stick" and cut it down to 14 inches. Round the front and rear with a piece of sandpaper and that is all there is to it.

The wheels, too, are easy to make. Take the piece of ¼x1x2-inch balsa sheet wood and make two circles, each one inch in diameter. Then, with your razor blade, carefully cut these two circles out and you have two wheels. Sandpaper the surface with fine paper, and then sandpaper the edges to round them smoothly with the piece of rough paper.

That's all there is to it. You have everything finished now with the exception of the propeller, wire hooks and fittings and the assembly of your model. We will give you these steps, which are new to you, in our next lessons, and then you will be ready to fly your plane out in the open.

BIDDLE PLANS LONG-RANGE RELIEF

HARRISBURG, June 18.—(AP.)—A planned program to provide security for relief workers from August through the spring of 1935 was announced today by Eric H. Biddle, executive director of the state Emergency Relief Board.

The future plans are based upon the indication by the federal government that it is its purpose to prosecute a long-term program through the winter and spring, he said.

The work relief projects, Biddle said, are being carried out on principles:

1—The state Relief Work Division planned the substantial completion of all remaining CWA projects in operation in 23 rural counties, as of May 31.

2—No new projects have been approved since March and very few have been approved since December last.

3—Projects in the districts where the unemployment factor is low are being eliminated as rapidly as possible.

4—In the remaining instances, projects are being brought to a point where economic loss will not result if they are discontinued.

5—The period ending August 31 is being used as a period for reorganization and careful planning for a work program which would extend to the spring of 1935.

Biddle said:

"In view of the fact that the program in the several counties got under way at varying degrees of speed, suffered weather delays in different degrees varying with location and type of projects, there is some variation at the present time in the amount of work to be completed on present projects."

However, work directors are cooperating on concluding projects now in operation and at the same time planning to provide continuous work and greater employment security during the succeeding fall and winter months. Them it is anticipated additional funds will be available to carry out the program.

ROXIE ARRESTED TWICE IN DAY

Roxie Long has his troubles with the law.

Last week he was lodged in Allegheny County Jail because grocers said checks tendered them in payment for groceries by Roxie were worthless. He later obtained his release.

Late yesterday Roxie, known as Rocco DiPippi, stepped from an auto with two other men at Locust and Walnut streets, Mt. Oliver, in front of Burgess C. W. Beckman's home.

Neighbors told Beckman of three "suspicious looking" men leaving a car which had no license plates. The burgess investigated and later arrested Roxie in Brownsville road.

Mt. Oliver police held him for illegal parking and state police later arrested him for driving without license plates or an owner's card. Roxie said he bought the auto in Dormont Saturday. He was released under $25 bond in each case.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS -:- By PAUL MALLON

Mussolini Greatest Showman Since Barnum

WASHINGTON, June 18.—What the world statesmen secretly have been fearing is an alliance of Italy, Germany, Japan and perhaps, Poland.

That would line the world up for war, with France, Russia and, eventually, Britain on the other side.

Such unspoken thoughts agitated the inner diplomatic circles as Primo Mussolini and Adolf Hitler closed the door of that Venetian villa the other day and buzzed in each other's ears, without even a stenographer or an interpreter present. It is an interesting possibility, but it will never happen.

Mussolini is too smart.

STAGE THUNDER

The Hitler-Mussolini meeting was a staged show. The producer was Mr. Mussolini who is the greatest showman since Barnum.

He dressed himself all up in the uniform of a fascist corporal. His Fascists put on the required demonstration for him just the same as followers of a presidential candidate whoop up demonstrations for their favorites in our national conventions.

To top it off, a dagger parade was held with the Fascisti marching before Messrs. Mussolini and Hitler with bared daggers aloft. The daggers were aimed at the skies, but Mr. Hitler got the point. He was in civilian clothes, the official pockets of which are so empty he could not buy daggers enough for a first-class street brawl.

SCHEME

The hidden purpose of the show was to offset the Franco-Russian alliance from a diplomatic standpoint. That is not very much of a secret.

Messrs. Mussolini and Hitler are the two European bad boys who were not invited to that alliance party. At least, Mussolini received a belated invitation which he was not expected to accept and Hitler was completely snubbed.

At heart, Mr. Mussolini dislikes France as much as anyone. That is saying a lot because he also dislikes Russia, Japan and Germany, in the order named. In fact the only one he really likes is Mussolini.

But his game is to stay on the fence in Europe, playing first with one side and then with the other. That is historic Italian foreign policy. It was even before the World War. In the present Franco-Russian game, Mussolini would rate no higher than a substitute halfback. In the German game, he can be a star quarterback.

Furthermore, he wants something from Germany now. It is the independence of Austria. To gain that, he would readily fight the German battle for increased armament at the various European conferences.

PROSPECTS

You can get sincere assurances privately in Italian quarters that Mr. Mussolini does not intend to go as far as getting tied up on a long contract with second-rate war teams like Germany and Japan. He will act as if he is doing it, but he will not actually do it.

If he gets Austrian independence from Hitler now, it will heal a European sore spot and really make war more remote. And next month he will team up on the other side of the fence.

It's a great game they play in European diplomacy, somewhat like our log rolling in Congress, only a little dirtier.

LEAKAGE

There was turmoil backstage in the Senate when the administration's compromise labor bill leaked out.

Floor Leader Robinson brought it from the White House, looking around corners as he went, so no one would see him. He slipped a copy to Republican Leader McNary secretly. The next he heard, copies were all over the press gallery and had been published in one paper.

Robinson warned newsmen that if they published the bill they would violate his wishes and perhaps also the federal law against publication of secret government documents.

Newsmen said that was too bad and, anyway, the bill was not a government document.

What happened was this: When McNary got his copy, he had several copies made so Republican Senators could look it over and decide whether they were going to support it. Several Senators slipped copies to newsmen and, in a few minutes, the bill was all over the place.

The reason the White House and Senator Robinson were so angry was that the bill had to be materially altered later.

NOTES

Enactment of the railroad pension bill is supposed to have been part of a deal made by the administration, with the rail workers several months ago to avoid a strike. At least, that is the word spread among Democrats in Congress and it explains why the measure was enacted so suddenly. The reason the House cut down the Nazi investigation appropriation is because the investigations has been sloppy. Much good testimony had been brought out, but not in an effective or striking way. The committee members are mostly amateur congressional investigators more than Mr. Pecora received for his successful stock market inquiry. . . . Some California Democrats here are moaning that the Socialist, Upton Sinclair, may win the Democratic gubernatorial nomination and there . . . Between the lines of the Peek report on foreign trade you can read the confusion that Mr. Peek does not know what he is going to do about foreign trade or how he is going to do it.

VACATION TIME.
WHEN THE SENATE PASSED SOME 350 BILLS IN ONE AFTERNOON A FEW DAYS AGO SENATOR COUZENS SAT UP AND SMILED. HAVING CHARTERED A YACHT FOR THE SUMMER IN ORDER TO GET AWAY FROM IT ALL" IT LOOKED AS THOUGH CONGRESS JUST WOULDN'T ADJOURN, AND THE SENATOR WOULD HAVE TO DO HIS CRUISING BETWEEN COMMITTEE MEETINGS AND SENATE ROLL CALLS.
BUT THE PICTURE HAS CLEARED. IT WONT BE LONG NOW BEFORE SENATOR FESS WILL BE SPELLBINDING OHIO VOTERS TO REELECT HIM IN NOVEMBER, AND LAFOLLETTE WILL BE OILING UP HIS NEW PROGRESSIVE MACHINE IN WISCONSIN, AND DAVE REED WILL BE BATTLING FOR VOTES IN THE HINTERLAND OF PENNSYLVANIA, AND SENATOR COUZENS WILL BE CRUISING ON THE ST. LAWRENCE, AND COUNTING THE THOUSAND ISLANDS.

OPERA, STAGE STARS :-: 'Melody Moments' Fades From Air :-: ON RADIO TONIGHT

Galli-Curci Among Big Features

Someone has suggested that Monday night, as far as the waftings slated for that particular time each week are concerned, could be improved upon.

The idea seems to be that the aerial contributions are too heavy—that there is not enough variety and showmanship; that, in a word, the radio Monday is indeed "blue."

And yet the current Monday night brings us Amelita Galli-Curci, Rosa Ponselle, Gladys Swarthout — three of opera's foremost; Helen Menken, direct from the Broadway cast of the much-lauded "Mary of Scotland;" Joe Cook and J. C. Flippen, injecting the essential humorous balance, and such orchestras as Jan Garber's, Wayne King's, Guy Lombardo's and Don Bestor's.

The general appeal of the first four named, of course, is classical and for those of the radio audience who cherish a breath of the best in performance. Yet, aside from the balance offered by supporting groups, each of the three singing stars bows to that other portion of listeners with at least one selection of the popularized semi-classical variety.

For instance, Galli-Curci, appearing as guest on the WCAE "Contented Hour" at 10, sings America's favorite lullaby as indicated by a two-months' nation-wide poll; Ponselle, on WJAS at 9, does Tosti's "Goodbye," and Swarthout, on WCAE at 8:30, "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life."

Helen Menken's appearance tonight, on WJAS at 9:30, is, by the way, her last at the present time, with the "Big Show" series fading from the air.

As has been mentioned, J. C. Flippen, of "Flippen-cies" fame, comes to the air for a one-time appearance tonight as guest star of the "California Melodies" show on WJAS at 8:30 . . . "Melody Moments," KDKA 9:30 bill, chalks up its two hundred and forty-sixth broadcast tonight and takes leave of the microphone for the summer . . .

"Afraid of Romance," a love-comedy in which a pretty girl gets a crazy legacy, a phoney husband and, finally, the right man, is KDKA's 10:45 show . . . Gordon, Dave and Bunny go to work on their new summer WJAS schedule—5:45 Mondays and Wednesday today . . .

Faced with death within a year, a "Voice of Experience" fan has asked the oracle's advice as to whether or not he should tell his wife. The answer goes on the air at 8 via WJAS . . . A new series of weekly programs by the New York City Staff Band of the Salvation Army opens on WJAS at 4:15 today . . .

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace will speak during the Wednesday network broadcast from the Advertising Federation of America convention in New York. WCAE will carry beginning at 1:30.

GLOBE TROTTING

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

Here is vacation money for some lucky soldiers.

Lieut Guy Griffith has their bonus checks but he can't locate the veterans.

Maybe through this column the vets will locate themselves.

The following is a list of names of Western Pennsylvania veterans whose checks could not be delivered because of wrong addresses:

CLARENCE FIELDS.
WILLIAM W. RUPP.
MICHAEL SILK.
JOHN G. PAOURES.
MIKE KRACIS.

If your name or one similar is listed above, will you inquire at Lieut. Griffith's office, 406 Nixon Building, for your check. Don't spend it all in one place.

* * *

Hector Poirer, Uniontown; Niela Rauck Cronk, New Derry; Timothy Carroll, Seventeenth street, Pittsburgh; Earl Bickley, Grove street, Pittsburgh.

Those named above are urged to contact Lieut. Griffith.

I want to thank Mrs. Alma Patt, Donora, from the bottom of my heart for her gift of puzzles for patients in hospitals.

I still can use more baby carriages and cribs.

Don't let them fall apart in the attic when I know husky youngsters who would like to kick them apart.

The Western Pennsylvania Humane Society wrote to inform me that the birds need as much help now as they did in the cold, snowy months.

In these days of limited rainfall it would be a tremendous service to the birds (and pets in general) if we placed water where birds (and pets) could receive a fresh supply at all times.

Local Highlights WJAS Tonight

The Rhythmites, novel vocal trio, return to WJAS tonight after many months' absence with a quarter-hour program at 7.

You should enjoy Jimmy Molinari's Band, at 6:15, and Paul Gannon's songs, at 6:45.

Off-the-Air Glimpses Of Radio

By AIRCASTER

Radio scenes . . .

Scene 1—Mark Warnow, the CBS maestro, is strolling in Brooklyn, the locale of his childhood. A passerby nods and stops.

Passerby:

"Howdy Mark, it's been years since I saw you. I hear you're doing alright!"

Warnow surveys the chap and remembers him as a boyhood playmate named Irving. What his last name is, Warnow cannot remember for the life of him. He greets him with studied nonchalance:

"Hi ya, Irving. Yeah, doin' well, thanks."

Then he remembers that this Irving, whose name he just can't recall, has a brother, and inquires:

"How's your brother, Dave? How's that guy who used to pal around with us?"

Irving:

"Dave's okay. Got a good job."

Warnow, still struggling to remember the family name:

"What doing?"

"Ah, Dave? Why Dave's president of the Radio Corporation."

Scene 2—A big advertising agency.

The executives are much annoyed by a comedian who has left them to go with another station, to begin performing on a Sunday night spot, opposite their own, next season—after the terrific build-up they have given him.

They glance at the books and pace nervously up and down. Then the head man speaks.

They will put on a show when their ex-clown begins his opposition, regardless of expense. They will replace the orchestra leader who remains friendly to the comedian. They will put in Paul Whiteman and not one comedian, but two, Ryan and Noblesse, the funny fellows of the "Carefree Carnival."

They will try to get Bing Crosby even if he wants more money than his former boss, Whiteman. They may even incorporate a dramatic sketch with George Arliss, even if he still insists on $100,000 for 13 weeks.

They believe it will be worth it to swamp the comic who walked out on them.

FIRST LADY REPLIES

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt received a letter from a radio listener the other day asking if she thought any radio performer could be worth $600 a minute. That was the amount of money Mrs. Roosevelt had been paid on her recent commercial series.

The First Lady's reply was both enlightening and characteristic. She wrote that she understood that the money was paid her as the President's wife and not as an individual or as an artist. She added that she frankly thought it was more than she earned. But, she stated, none of the money went to her directly. She wrote:

"There are people on the radio who are paid this same amount, but I do not flatter myself that I, as an individual, would be paid it.

"However, my series put money into circulation, the money was spent for a good purpose. It was turned over to charity. Otherwise, a lot of unfortunate people would not have been helped. Therefore, I think I was justified."

Mrs. Roosevelt's radio earnings went mostly to a Quaker society and was devoted to rehabilitating the helpless.

There's a new engineer about ready for installation at CBS. His name is Harry Greenberg and his story is interesting, I think. If he had wanted to be a singer or a comedian, the circumstances wouldn't even be odd, because that's the hope of every attendant at a radio studio.

Harry, until the other day, was a taxi driver. He had stationed his cab outside the CBS Building nightly for four years. Whenever artists, announcers or engineers needed to go places in a hurry they went with Greenberg.

He used to help the technicians set up their equipment. Gradually he learned all about remote control panels, lapel microphones, milliammeters, relays and whatnot. He also had heard artists talking in his cab about the big money. But he had no illusions, and decided he'd rather be an engineer.

He visited the studios in his leisure, took a course—and now, he's going to sell the cab.

Globe-Trotter Schedule

In order that WCAE listeners may hear network broadcasts from the American Federation of Advertisers, New York, from 1:30 to 2:30 p. m., the afternoon Globe-Trotter broadcast has been scheduled at 3 p. m. today and Wednesday.

He will be heard tomorrow at his usual times, which will be resumed regularly Thursday.

Popular melodies of both Americas, all in special arrangements, will feature the Pittsburghers WCAE program tonight at 7:15.

JUNIOR PATROL MAIL BOX

There is beauty almost everywhere if you have eyes to see, fellows!

Some people seem to think that beauty exists in only certain places. They seldom pick these places of beauty themselves. They wait for somebody to tell them, or else they read a description that says:

"For sheer scenic magnificence and for pure natural beauty, see this place!"

And so they decide that it must be a wonderful place, indeed.

As a matter of fact, all parts of the world are full of beauty, and where the world is not truly beautiful, it is often man's fault.

There are even some people who pretend that Pittsburgh is not a beautiful place. They say: "Smoky city. There are just hills and ugly houses, and ugly mills, and ugly rivers there."

We think they are very wrong.

Perhaps they never went up to the top of Mt. Washington after dark, when the lights of Pittsburgh come out like the stars on a clear night.

Perhaps they never stood on the Boulevard of the Allies and looked up the Monongahela River toward the mills and factories beyond the bend of the river. The square-cut boats on the river, the tall stacks of the mills, pouring out yellow and black smoke, the gaunt outlines of the furnaces and factories—these things may not be beautiful by themselves, but together, with the river, as you look up the valley, they form a beautiful picture.

Stand sometime on the top of Herron Hill, and look down across Oakland and out into Schenley Park. Is there no beauty there at all? We think there is, and we think that a thousand other spots are full of beauty in and around Pittsburgh. Up and down the rivers, in all the parks, looking out across the farming country while driving down any of the highways that enter Pittsburgh, there are beautiful views beyond number. And some surpass others.

Now we wonder if Junior Patrol members have found these beautiful views. We would like to have you write us letters and describe the view you like the best—and where it is. Will you do that?

RADIUM RENTAL PROTESTED

CLEVELAND, June 18.—(AP.)—A warning against dangers in renting radium has been made public here. It was a report by Dr. Albert Soiland, of Los Angeles, to the American Radiological Society which met here in connection with the American Medical Association.

Dr. Soiland said that between 5 and 10 grams of radium in this country is constantly for rent, mostly to physicians. It is loaned in the form of plaques, needles, and radon seeds, the latter a radium emanation.

Many of the persons renting these radium appliances he said, even among physicians, are not trained in their use and do not know the extreme dangers.

NEW LAXATIVE DISCOVERY HAS DELICIOUS TASTE

SODY

Is Name Given New Drink Discovered By Two Scientists

CHILDREN LIKE ICE CREAM SODA TASTE

Discovery of the first liquid laxative that does not taste like a medicine but rather like a delicious carbonated drink with all the full flavor of an ice cream soda has been announced by Polar Water Company.

A Scientific Discovery

"The discovery, which has been named 'SODY,'" it was explained, "is the result of the work of two well known scientists who must remain unnamed because of their connection with a high institution of learning.

"One of these men had occasion to observe thousands of people in the act of 'taking' laxatives and noticed that invariably they practically 'cracked their faces' trying to get it down. He wondered if something couldn't be done about it. With his fellow scientist he went to work and after two years they evolved SODY."

Thorough, Gentle, Delicious

Both men were impressed with the fact that a naturally acting, non-griping, thoroughly cleansing laxative must be a liquid. No other kind can get the right results, they knew.

SODY, so-called because of its ice cream soda taste, combines the beneficial and well known cleansing properties of fruit salts with a delicious flavor and provides a pleasing drink which children really like and adults gratefully appreciate.

Immensely Popular

However with all of SODY'S pleasant drinking qualities it loses none of its effectiveness. In fact it is so thorough in its action that a six-ounce bottle does the work of 12 ounces of the usual unpleasant tasting medicines in relieving constipation, indigestion, headaches and related disorders.

Since being offered to the public SODY has enjoyed a popular response. Parents who had difficulty getting children to "take" laxatives now find the youngsters eagerly drink SODY, particularly when it is served with a scoop of ice cream and straws, just like at a soda fountain.

No More "Morning After"

And one of the greatest boons SODY confers is the way in which it routs that "morning after" feeling. When the party's last drink is a serving of SODY, you'll be on deck next morning with a clear cool head and full of the old pep!

Physicians and hospitals recommend SODY because of its gentle, thorough and non-habit forming action. Ask for SODY at your drug store or soda fountain. SODY is produced under strict laboratory supervision by Polar Water Company, Pittsburgh, Pa.

65TH-ANNIVERSARY BOGGS & BUHL

Inherited Home Causes Strife in Family

I have two places I call home. One in Pittsburgh. Near the town in which I was born, the little town nestling among the hills of Westmoreland County, a town named after one of my forebears, and where the church and the graveyard given by this same forebear stand in mute evidence that he passed among men as a man . . .

Miss Brunot

My other home is built on a sand dune in Massachusetts. At the very end of Cape Cod . . . There I can watch the blue, green bay with its incoming tide. I can spot sails with their white masts flashing in the sunlight. I can see little oil racers, painted red, dash to and fro bearing their burdens. I can observe great yachts, summer sea homes of multi-millionaires, as they anchor after a race with the tireless foam of the Atlantic . . .

Blue orioles nest in my wild cherry trees . . . robins build habitations in the low bayberry bushes . . . toads jump merrily over the green sod into which I have put so much effort for its growth . . . A huge stretch of rosebushes cover the long and high fence, and soon those rose bushes will put on their gay garments of pink, and people will slow their automobiles to exclaim at their beauty . . .

LIKES BOTH HOMES

It is hard for me to pass judgment upon these two places that I call home . . . One my working mart . . . The other my sojourney in play . . .

They are both dear to the heart of me . . . They entwine pleasant as well as pitiful memory . . . They bring certain faces to me up from the past . . . Faces gone, one way or the other . . . They mean new encounters with human beings . . . They are my special privileges, and as such precious . . .

Life itself, after all, is our greatest boon. It is the many-colored prism in which we see reflected what we create . . . And so we learn to care for it, and cherish for it . . . And look upon death as a robber of what is our very own . . .

Yet on the whole each one of us is such a small part, that we must be designated not only by name, but also by location in order that we be known to all . . .

Marion Brunot . . . Pittsburgh . . . Provincetown . . . John Jones, Pasadena . . . Sally Smith . . . Oshkosh . . . and so on . . .

SATISFIED WITH HOME

I heard a crowd of women talking . . . Each one was vying with the other, that is each one, but one, in telling what her ideal dwelling place would be . . . Great imaginary piazzas swept around huge houses . . . Libraries so long that every published book might be accommodated . . . Sitting rooms filled with luxurious chairs, Sheraton sideboards, Hepplewhite tables, Windsor chairs . . .

Oh, these women had mammoth ideas, and their tongues wagged nimbly . . . Then quietly the one silent woman spoke . . .

"I never go gadding for a home. . . I have one. I would rather have it than any other one I can think of . . . "

Then it was the turn for the others to be silent. . . . For the speaker's home was small, and in an unpretentuous valley. But it had a way about it that set it apart. For it had the charm of its owner. It had the inimitable something that told of a happy heart that had created it. . . .

STRIFE IN FAMILY

Which brings me to a sister who writes—

Dear Miss Brunot:

I have done just everything to keep my home together. It is the home of my people, and I inherited it. When I married, I persuaded my husband to live on it. It is a farm, and we have never been happy. For he has always had an idea he could make good in Pittsburgh. Every time things go wrong, he nags me about this.

He has influenced my two children not to like the place, and now that they are growing up, they are grumpy whenever I give them work to do. . . . He thinks he is a machinist, and is always tinkering about any piece of mechanism he can find. He even has invented several things. Senseless, to be sure. And when I remonstrate, he just says nothing.

I have sacrificed so much to keep things together, and now I dont know what to do . . . There is no way else for me to turn, since my children are with him instead of me.

Help me, Miss Brunot. I know you can.

A WORRIED WIFE.

CHANGE ADVISED

There is one way left for you to turn, sister, and that is toward the CITY. Your husband has never been allowed to stand on his own feet, and he is resentful . . . The children, growing up in your home, have had their eyes, and have not learned to sympathize with their father merely by what he has said.

Your old home may be very dear to you. But is it worth the price of everything else, even the love of your family? I don't think so. You may have the superior judgment. But only experiment can prove this . . . So in the fall, drift toward the city. Let your husband develop his mechanical bent . . . Let your children see what they are dreaming about . . . in the end you may all go back to the farm. And it will then be happier for you. You may be too fond of being the hub of the WHEEL . . . How about it, sister?

FAY KING PAYS HOMAGE TO THE OLDEST GRADUATE OF ANNAPOLIS

OH NO! NOT THE BEST, BUT UNTIL I WAS 68 I DANCED A GREAT DEAL, AND ENJOYED IT!
THEY TELL ME THAT YOU WERE THE BEST DANCER IN THE NAVY!
REAR ADMIRAL BRADLEY A. FISKE, U.S.N., RETIRED
THE READING MACHINE WHICH HE INVENTED FOR READING THE LONGEST BOOKS EASILY IF PRINTED IN MINIATURE
I WISH EVERY SAILOR COULD HAVE HEARD ALL THE FINE THINGS HE SAID ABOUT THEM!
FAY-KING

By FAY KING

As the oldest graduate of Annapolis present, Rear Admiral Bradley A. Fiske, U. S. N., retired, led the grand march at the Naval Ball. Sixty years ago, Memorial Day, he graduated. June 13 was his eightieth birthday.

We observe the alert energy of every man of the fleet, from sailor to admiral. Judging by Rear Admiral Fiske, retired, Navy men remain so. Tall, slender, a twinkle in his blue eyes, the spring of youth in his step still, I found him surrounded by friends.

Six published books, radio talks, magazine articles and inventions have kept him busy.

When President Roosevelt was Assistant Secretary of the Navy he inquired how many U. S. patents the admiral now had.

"About 57, I think!"

"Ah, Fiske's '57 varieties!' " said Mr. Roosevelt, laughingly.

Given in Marriage :: A Sequel to Heart Of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Wonders If Ede Will Stay

I knew that Lillian was tactfully averting her eyes from mine as she uttered Edith Fairfax's name, but I felt myself wincing nevertheless. Fresh in my memory was the scene of the night before, when a bystander unfamiliar with the facts in the case would have though Edith—weeping, anguished, almost hysterical—was Dicky's wife or his sweetheart. We finally succeeded in getting her to sleep, but I knew that Lillian was as uncertain as I about Edith's actions when she would awaken.

"I wonder," Lillian said meditatively, when I did not speak "if she'll have the collossal gall to stick around here until Dick gets home."

I looked up joyfully startled. "Oh! Do you think they'll let Dicky come home from the hospital today?" I asked.

"I don't think 'they' will have anything to say about it," she retorted. "Once that examination of his arm is completed, the Dicky bird is going to flap his wings away from there so fast everybody in the hospital, from the head to the youngest practitioner, will be dizzy from the beating of the air."

PREDICTS HE'LL BE HOME

"But," I protested — wanting terribly to believe her, but remembering the tragic look in Dicky's face when he contemplated the possibility of his drawing arm having been injured by the bullet from the mysterious assassin in the woods —"suppose there is an injury to his arm which requires surgical attention—"

"Look here, you piping pessimist," Lillian demanded, with indignation so well-simulated that I almost believed in it, "what right have you to suppose that he has suffered any injury that matters? It's a million to one that the bullet only made a flesh wound."

"I know," I said stubbornly, "But if that millionth chance—"

"If that millionth chance should materialize," Lillian finished for me, "what makes you think the Dicky bird would have to stay in the hospital because of it?"

"Why—oughtn't he?" I began weakly, and she gave a short little laugh.

"And you've been a lawfully wedded wife how many years?" she gibed. "Exercise that massive brain for a second or two. When did you ever know a man to stay put in a hospital unless he was too helpless to get out, or had been scared out of his eye teeth by some physician with hypnotic powers?

"And in Dicky's case, anyway, it really isn't necessary for him to stay there, no matter how adverse the decision concerning his arm. The surgeon could come here to give it any necessary treatment. Katrina is the best nurse going, and—you ought to know why the Dicky bird would want to flutter home as soon as possible."

I did know, and there was a sudden glow in my heart at the knowledge that in any physical suffering, mental stress, sudden emergency, or difficult problem, my husband's first thought was to get to my side, not always for any specific aid of comfort but just to be near me. The fact that he often was cross when he reached me, behaving like the traditional "bear with a sore head," did not alter the fact—the most precious, the headiest a wife can have offered her—that he wanted me with him in trouble.

"Then you think he'll be home today?" I asked banally, too anxious to cover my emotion to talk in anything but stereotyped phrases.

VOTES FOR SLEEP

"I wish I were as sure of getting past St. Peter at the pearly gates," she returned with a smile. "But that isn't the question before the house just now. As far as I can see, with all these people getting out, we have only two problems—this proposition of Lee Chow with all its ramifications, and the lesser one of what Ede's going to pull. We can't settle either one of 'em until tomorrow, so I vote to get some sleep for the rest of the night. What do you say?"

"I vote aye," I said promptly, "but suppose father or Hugh wants us for something?"

"They won't," she said confidently, "but on the chance, we'll fix up a card allee samee hotels."

She took a sheet of notepaper from Katherine's desk, printed some letters hurriedly and held it out to me.

"If you need us, call. If not, let us sleep," it read, and I nodded my appreciation of her work.

"Now," she said, when she had affixed it to the outside of the door, and had come back after closing it and turning the key, "let's get to sleep, for something tells me we have a full day before us. It might even overflow."

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Safety First

No matter how much of a certainty the making of a hand at Bridge may appear to be, the wise Declarer never neglects the precaution of safety. It is, for instance, extremely unwise to assume merely because you have a six-card suit in one hand headed by the Ace-King-Queen, of which you hold a singleton in the other, that the remaining cards in that suit will be divided 3-3. Occasionally a situation develops where one can do nothing else but hope for the best. This occurs in cases where lack of entries are involved. However, where the Declarer has in one hand an apparently established and almost certainly establishable suit, he should not trust to luck but should play the hand on the generally sound principle of "Safety First."

The hand below, which was sent to me by Dr. Herman B. Cohen, of Philadelphia, is a case in point.

South, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ A J 6 4 2 ♡ 6 ◇ 9 5 4 ♣ K J 9 4
♠ Q 9 8 5 ♡ 10 ◇ K J 6 2 ♣ 8 6 5 2	West North East South	♠ K 10 7 3 ♡ J 9 8 4 3 ◇ Q 10 8 3 ♣ —
	♠ — ♡ A K Q 7 5 2 ◇ A 7 ♣ A Q 10 7 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	4 ♣	Pass
4 N T	Pass	6 ♣	Pass
7 ♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

South's Opening bid of two hearts with only 4½ honor-tricks is based on his excellent 6-5-2 distribution. However, there would be an excellent chance of reaching the Grand Slam even without an Opening Forcing bid, as a Force would certainly occur on a subsequent round.

When the Dummy was spread, after West opened a diamond, the contract appeared to South to be absolutely safe. He therefore drew the trumps, finding all four bunched in the West hand, discarded his losing diamond on the spade Ace, and then led a heart, confidently hoping that the suit would break. Unfortunately, East held five hearts, and as a result the contract was defeated.

I is obvious, of course, that except against a void in hearts, a Grand Slam can be made, provided a high heart is led and subsequently two hearts are ruffed in Dummy.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Bunions Are Frequently Inherited

Not so long ago I wrote about corns. Since then I have received many requests for information concerning bunions.

Dr. Copeland

Corns and bunions are familiar afflictions of modern civilizations. It is probable that our forefathers rarely suffered from these annoying complaints. They had other and worse miseries to contend with, but foot trouble of this sort was not common.

Normally the joints of the foot as well as other joints of the body are surrounded by small sacs. These sacs contain "synovial fluid," which lubricates the joint. The sac which contains the fluid is called the "bursa."

It is very easy for a bursa to become inflamed. Pressure or irritation caused by the wearing of improperly fitted shoes, or from the lack of foot hygiene, often leads to bursitis or inflammation of the sac. When the sac swells the overlying skin becomes thickened and the big toe is forced inward. This produces the deformity called a bunion.

Contrary to the common belief, bunion, or "hallux valgus," as it is known medically, is not always the result of wearing improperly fitted shoes. The defect may be traced to some constitutional disorder, such as arthritis, gout, diabetes or rheumatism.

Occasionally the condition appears without any history of pressure or irritation, and in such cases it is believed by some to be inherited. I am not impressed by this theory. It will be found that a severe blow or injury, tight shoes, and lack of foot hygiene are responsible for most cases of bunion.

If the defect is recognized in its early stages, cure can be accomplished by massage, the wearing of proper shoes, foot exercises, and the use of special foot baths. In most instances, unfortunately, the condition is neglected and the physician is not consulted until severe damage has been done the afflicted joint. In such cases, complete cure can be brought about only by a minor surgical operation.

Many persons resort to the use of bunion plasters. These are frequently beneficial and usually aid in the prevention of further irritation. They are of particular value in that they remove pressure from the sore or inflamed joint.

But it must be borne in mind that if the sufferer continues to wear tight and pointed shoes and neglects the hygiene of his feet, it is probable he will never be cured of the affliction.

Do not permit yourself to be the victim of fashion. Bear in mind that a shoe should be long and wide enough to permit free movement of the toes. Pointed shoes cramp the feet and should be avoided. The inner border of the shoe should fit snugly and firmly support the arch. The heel should be broad and low and certainly never highed than one to one and a quarter inches.

It is a good plan to change the shoes frequently. This is not an extravagant procedure, for your shoes will last longer. Certainly your feet will be greatly benefited by this simple practice.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

There has been considerable uproar about the dangers of eyebrow dyeing. Yet there are preparations that are harmless, as the proprietor of every beauty shop knows.

Don't attempt the job yourself. It requires a steady hand and self-treatment is altogether difficult. As for lashes, there are simple applications like mascara that serve very well.

Household Hints

Before putting away patent leather shoes that are not worn regularly, rub them well with olive oil. This will preserve the leather.

Burnt milk loses its unpleasant taste if a pinch of salt and a teaspoon of sugar are added before it gets cold.

To clean old paint brushes, work vinegar into the hairs. This is better than hot water and turpentine, as it restores elasticity.

Pipe cleaners used between prongs of table forks will remove particles that may adhere after washing.

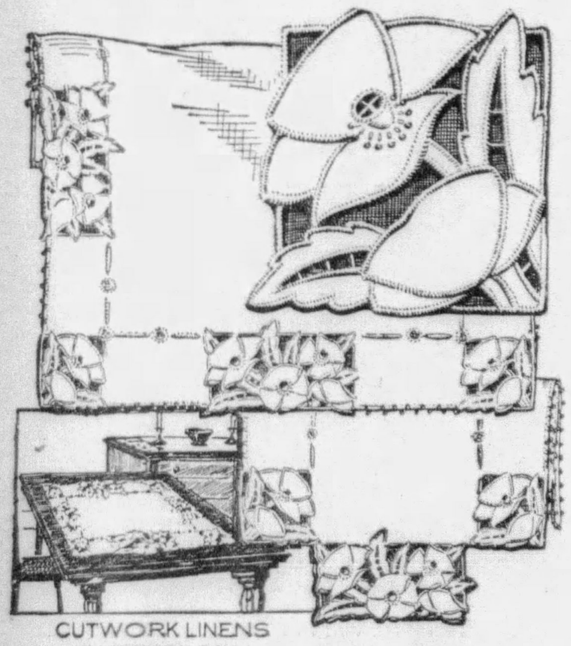
On washing day place a slice of raw lemon in with the white clothes. It helps to whiten them.

Use a little turpentine when cleaning a dirty sink. It will remove all grease, and the smell evaporates quickly.

Glycerine rubbed over the surface of corks will prevent them from sticking in the necks of bottles containing cement, glue, shoe polish, etc.

Eiderdown quilts should be washed in a mixture of soap jelly and warm water to which a tablespoon of ammonia has been added.

LAURA WHEELER DESIGNS



CUTWORK LINENS
PATTERN 764

Here is a cutwork pattern that will appeal to every needlewoman who loves this type of embroidery. Because of the simplicity of the design, it stands out clearly in contrast to the background. Its special feature, though, is that it is made without bars, except for a few in the leaves which add a decorative touch to them. The design lends itself to a great variety of large and small linens. Since cutwork, a simple form of buttonhole stitch, makes linens that are as decorative as they are practical, these motifs offer every needlewoman a chance to make some choice articles.

Pattern 764 comes to you with a transfer pattern of four 5½x10 inch motifs, two and two reverse 4½ inch corners, four ¾ inch corners, and two yards of ¾ inch banding; illustrations of all stitches used; directions for doing cutwork; material requirements and suggestions for uses of the motifs.

Send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) for this pattern to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York, N. Y.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Engagement Ring

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Some time ago you advised that an engagement ring did not have to be a diamond, and that it was a matter of choice with the girl what she wanted to wear.

1—What I would like to know is whether or not it is permissible for the girl to select the ring personally, or whether this should be left to the man entirely?

1—Very wisely, nowadays it is the custom for the man to consult with the girl as to the kind of engagement ring she prefers. Either they go together to the jeweler's and consult with him, or the man first consults with the jeweler and the jeweler either comes to the girl's home or sends an assistant with a choice of rings that the fiance has selected. Or the jeweler brings several unset stones, and several sketches of the setting that he suggests are appropriate.

2—A star sapphire is one of the loveliest things in the world, I think, and is often chosen as an engagement ring. Well it may be, for surely the wondrous star glowing in its depths is a symbol of happiness! But usually they are expensive!

For the Bride-to-Be

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—In a case where there are to be several bridesmaids, is it customary for each girl to have a shower for the bride?

2—Will you kindly suggest a few appropriate wedding gifts?

E.

1—No, it is customary for a group of the close friends of the bride-to-be to combine in giving a shower for her. The bridesmaids are, of course, usually in this group.

2—There are, at the moment, especially beautiful clocks of all kinds and in all prices. Most effective linen sets for breakfast, luncheon, tea, dinner. Many new designs in dishes approriate for buffet service and supper service, some with electrical connection. Convenient smoking sets, for dining table or living room table. Beautiful desk sets or single desk accessories. Simple and lovely designs in glass and china, and in these you might choose a set of plates for salad or dessert.

Wedding Toasts

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please inform me as to the duties of a toastmaster at a hotel wedding supper.

BILL.

If the best man is chosen (and he usually is) to be the one to offer a toast to the bride and groom, the toastmaster calls on him first. To this toast the groom responds for botn himself and his bride.

If a special feature is going to be made of the toasting (and apparently this is to be done, since there is to be a "toastmaster") the bridal attendants may be toasted, individually, or the maid of honor first and then the bridesmaids collectively, and then the attendants of the groom, the best man and then the group of ushers. If the toastmaster still wants to carry on, he may suggest a toast to the mother and father of the bride and then to the mother and father of the groom.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

There are days that are not so warm that allow us to rush into town and attend to various things. For such occasions there is a charming dress of blue and white printed crepe de Chine with a tailored jacket with blue velvet revers. Cuffs and link buttons are at the fitted waist. For town, blue accessories should be worn with it, leaving white for the country.

M'NAIR DETECTIVE, HELD IN POLICE ROW, ESCAPES HEARING

27,000 GIRLS BAIT TRAPS FOR BAER

International News Service.

NEW YORK, June 18.—"Adonis," "Perfect Man," "Frieze of the Parthenon."

These were a few of the honeyed words culled today from the avalanche of mash notes which have descended upon Max Baer since the handsome California boxer toppled the heavyweight championship crown from the brow of Carnera.

No less than 10,000 girls have written to Maxie since Thursday night, according to Ancil Hoffman, his manager. Some 14,000 have telephoned and more than 3,000 tried to jam their way into his hotel quarters, Hoffman warned:

"Now, don't print anything that'll make them stop writing. We want them to write, and we answer every letter."

A girl decribed as a "young, reckless and beautiful" debutante, wrote:

"I dare you to meet me."

Another said that after seeing Baer she had given her fiance the gate for all time.

One pleaded with Maxie just to "drop me a few lines—you don't know how happy I will be." And one prayed for a picture or a meeting. A girl asked how much it would cost to go out with him.

Here is a typical sample of the mash notes:

"My Adonis: You are the epitome of my dreams. I knew that sometime, somewhere in this prosaic world there would be born the perfect man. You are it—and I bow before your altar. You have stepped as you are a frieze of the Parthenon. Praxiteles dreamed of such as you when he sculpted the Discobolus. I am rich, young and not unattractive. My home is in Westchester, nestling in trees amid broad acres of rolling hills and valleys. Come to my arms, my hero."

To top it off, Hoffman said, she signed it "Venus."

FULLER, EMORY PASTOR, TO QUIT

The Rev. Dr. M. B. Fuller, 66, for three years pastor of the Emory Methodist Episcopal Church and one of the most prominent Methodist ministers in the United States, has indicated to the church board that he will ask to be allowed to retire from his pastorate in October.

Dr. Fuller issued this statement today:

"Upon the recommendation of my physician I have indicated to my official board my intention of asking for the retired relation at the next session of the Pittsburgh conference to be held in Johnstown from October 3 to 8."

Dr. Fuller came to Emory Church three years ago from the Lakewood (O.) Methodist Church, the largest Methodist congregation in the United States. He exchanged pulpits with the Rev. Dr. W. T. Duncan. He has served 43 years in the ministry.

Will Sing First Mass For Brother-Priest

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., June 18.—The Rev. John Paul Simko, ordained a priest yesterday at St. Vincent's Archabbey, Latrobe, tomorrow sings his first high mass of requiem in St. John the Baptist Church, Perryopolis, for his brother, Father Stephen Paul Simko, who died Saturday at New Bedford. A priest's choir will chant the office of the dead, in the church where the deceased priest was pastor for five years.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., June 18.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

See where one strike is ended. Nobody won anything, but you always word the agreement in such way that it looks like both sides gained something. China (by far the smartest nation in the world) has a word that I don't know how in the world we live without it. It's called "face," saving face. We have it just as much as China does, and call it by a hundred things, but it all gets back to the same thing "face." "How can I do nothing, and still make it look like I done something." Congress would have adjourned Saturday night, and the country would have arose Monday morning in the happiest and most optimistic mood, but each congressman tried to get his pet bill through, so he could go home and save "face." Yours, WILL.

First Girl Friend Came Into Life Simultaneously With First Fight, at 19, and at 25 He Has Conquered the World, New Champ Says—Punch on Chin Changed Him From Coward Into Fearless Fighter

By MAX BAER,

I began to wing guys for a loop with my fists, and then went to Hollywood for a while. My tough break is that I haven't met tens of thousands. But give me time, girls. I'll catch up with all of you!

I'm the fellow who didn't know what great little pals girls could be until I was 20, but I'm a cinch to make up for lost time.

Quite a few folks say I'm conceited. What they should say is that I'm confident. The way I look at it is that a conceited guy makes motions of greatness—and never makes good.

Knew He'd Whip Carnera and Win Title

I've been making motions of greatness and saying how good I am since 1929—and making good. See the difference? I said I'd be champion. I've whipped every fellow that's been in my way—including the Primo Canary Bird.

I boxed that Canary in California when I was doing that picture, and I learned a lot. He's no hitter—and he certainly didn't hurt me. He's a made fighter—not a natural one. The things he does are the things he's been taught to do. So long as I was doing the expected, he knew what to do. He's been well taught.

But when I pulled a few tricks out of the satchel and socked him hard, he had no defense—he just stood and gawped, or went down.

And so I copped the title, whipping Carnera to a frazzle after getting him to the boiling point before the fight. You all know what happened on June 14. I'll have some more details about that later . . .

CHAPTER II

The ranch where I lived at the time I was 18 was in Twin Oaks, Cal., just outside of the town of Livermore.

Those who have lived in small places know that the big social event is the weekly dance.

I didn't dance. But I usually went to the socials with a bunch of boys for the purpose of doing a little hell-raising. Usually we picked out the fellows in our crowd who were "girling." By that, I mean those who knew how to dance and had escorted girls. Whenever we got the chance, we plagued them.

At dances out our way everybody took a jug of wine to the affair and, between dances, the people would go to their autos or buggies where the jug was hidden—or locked up—and take a nip or two. My gang liked wine when it could get it, and raiding the cars whenever there was a chance was considered all right with them.

Although I helped them, I never took a drink—never touched anything alcoholic—up to the time I was 20. That's another one for Ripley to tell the people who think I've been drying up a few wineries and a distillery or two ever since I started making a little loose money.

He Can't Help Grinning When Hit

Several days before the particular dance night, which changed my life entirely, one of those traveling painters came to town and got a job daubing a church steeple. He went to the dance with a girl and a jug of wine, failed to lock his car, and my pals stole the wine and drank it.

The painter, discovering his loss, began to yell and demanded to know who did the job. Some tattler pointed us out. The painter was a big bird—6 feet tall, and weighed about 200 or so. The other boys already had taken it on the lam before I saw the painter charging at me.

I was trapped—couldn't run away. If ever a boy was petrified with terror, I was that boy. I just stood, waiting for my doom. I remember shivering; remember that my teeth chattered and my heart nearly knocked my ribs loose.

With a wild oath the painter leaped at me—closed in—swung. The punch caught me flush on the chin.

Then something happened that I cannot fully describe. I felt glad—wildly glad—proud—immensely relieved, inside. I had been hit—and was still alive. Hit, and still on my feet. Hit, and standing up.

I started to laugh—a crazy sort of laugh—and a daffy sort of grin came over my face. I wasn't conscious of laughing or grinning. The boys told me about it later. It's the same laugh that comes to me now—the same grin—whenever I am lathered pretty well by an opponent's fists.

I was not aware then of laughing or grinning. In all my fights since then that grin has become a habit, but I am not aware of it. I grin, and don't know I am doing it. I never laughed that way before—never grinned like that—until that punch landed.

Perhaps some doctor or scientist can explain why I do it. I can't.

I've said that up to the very instant that blow struck me, with 200 pounds of enraged manhood behind it, I was the yellowest kid in America. I was in constant fear of pain—physical hurt. Since it hit, I have feared no living human. I mean that.

In one second of time some kind of a miracle happened to me. My whole attitude toward life—my whole life—was changed.

The little scared lamb—the yellow kid—became a roaring lion; or should I say Baer?

Coward Becomes Courageous Lion

When I was hit, I was standing in a hollow square between parked automobiles and buggies. Many of the cars had their headlights on, and most of these shone on the painter and myself, because we were in about the center of that square.

I don't know what the painter would have done if I hadn't pulled that wild laugh and that daffier grin. But I do know that instead of tearing in at me he stopped, stood still, looked at me—a strangely, puzzled man. He had banged me hard enough to flatten any man—and there I was standing and grinning.

Up to that exact moment I never had swung a punch at any living human. But I knew the motion. Fear was all gone from me. I was mad, for the first time in my life—boiling mad. This guy had socked me for something I hadn't done. I hadn't stolen his wine.

I actually leaned over until my right hand touched the ground so as to get leverage for a punch. I didn't close my fist until it touched the ground. Then I let go. I wasn't aiming for the chin—didn't know it was the vital spot. I just threw that punch at his head, hoping it would land.

And it did—alongside the left ear. The marksmanship wasn't so hot then. But there was steam in the drive, because the fellow went down as if hit by a sledge hammer. He didn't just crumple and then wilt to the ground. It was as if I had tipped over a heavy statue.

I saw him there at my feet—out, out and out. Some strange feeling came within me. My blood seemed to be racing in my veins. I was wildly happy. I, who had lived a life of fear; I, who had been afraid, had with one blow knocked a giant of a man into insensibility.

I took one look at the still unconscious painter—and laughed. But I didn't know I was laughing. I grinned—and have no remembrance of that. My pals, who had slipped back to see the fight, told me about it.

All that I know is that I, who had been coward for 19 years, as I saw what had happened because of one punch, suddenly felt within me a voice which said:

"Max, you can whip any man in the world with your fists."

I've never lost that faith. In the years since, I've had some tough fights and I've blown a few decisions. But no defeat ever has discouraged me. The voice always has repeated the message of that night. It's the thing that prompts me to do all the boasting; it's the something that keeps my confidence at the boiling point, despite any and all setbacks.

"I'm Greatest—and I'll Prove It!"

The inner voice told me I was cinch to be the champion; and I've spoken aloud its message through five years. Folks call it boasting. That's all right. They can call it what they will. I'm the greatest heavyweight boxer in the world—and I proved it.

I knew I could beat the Canary Bird (Primo Carnera). I can beat five Canary Birds—10 of them—a hundred, if necessary. The voice says so. It never has been wrong. It never will be wrong, no matter how much I loaf, no matter how many girls are in my life, no matter if I take a drink now and then.

The morning after the fight I said to my father: "I'm through with ranching. I'm going to be a fighter."

That was my father's turn to laugh. He hadn't heard the story about the fight. He just knew me as the biggest physical coward a father ever had produced.

That afternoon I went into Oakland, Cal., and paid $25 for a big canvas punching bag; lugged it back to the ranch; set it up—and that's when I started in the profession in which even the Italians will admit I'm the head man.

I am the champion.

Novelties Stolen From Uptown Store

An undetermined amount of loot was taken from a novelty store at 917 Fifth avenue early today, according to a report to police by A. M. Palm, proprietor. Police said the job was probably the work of youngsters. A rear door had been jimmied.

SOOST REPLIES TO JOHNSTON

Councilman William J. Soost today was preparing to ask Council to censure Public Works Director Leslie M. Johnston for remarks alleged to have been made at a meeting of the Henry George Club last Friday.

Johnston was alleged to have declared that Councilmen, "one after the other," came to his office "leading somebody by the hand whom they want to put on the payroll."

Soost said:

"I have never asked Director Johnston for any favors, and I never got any."

Gravestone Topples, Killing Child at Play

CHICAGO, June 18.—(AP.)—Three-year-old James McKeon went to a cemetery yesterday with his parents while they placed flowers on the grave of a relative.

As the child played on another grave a portion of a newly cemented headstone suddenly toppled, striking him. He died of a fractured skull.

MAYOR BERATES OFFICERS ON ARREST

Moritz Explains Case As 'Just a Little Misunderstanding'

It's fun to be a city detective and at the same time a personal friend of Mayor McNair's.

Take the case of Stewart Dapp, a city sleuth, who was arrested yesterday after being accused of arguing and tussling with a policeman.

Dapp was scheduled to be arraigned in Oakland Police Court today, but he wasn't.

Magistrate Theodore L. Moritz, who is also the Mayor's secretary, explained that the case was being "adjusted—just a little misunderstanding."

CASE 'HELD OVER'

Moritz said he was holding over the case, that Dapp might get a hearing tomorrow—"after some things were ironed out."

What were those "things?" Moritz revealed:

"Oh, some things."

But later Moritz wrote "discharged" opposite Dapp's name.

The Mayor had said he would attend the scheduled hearing today, but he didn't show up either.

His Honor was very interested in the case, possibly because he appointed Dapp to the detective force.

After Dapp had been taken to the police station following his arrest, he telephoned to the Mayor. A moment later the Mayor called back and berated the officers in charge. He was quoted as saying:

"This man says you refuse to accept a bond from him."

The Mayor was informed that he was wrong, that the prisoner already had been informed that he would be released on his own recognizance. This was done.

According to police records, Patrolman J. F. McGuire, accompanied by Patrolman Ed McCall in a radio car, answered a call to Dapp's home at 218 Semple street last night.

Dapp was quoted as saying:

"My car won't run. Will you give me a push?"

McGuire informed Dapp that it was an extraordinary request to make of police but consented to help.

For a block McGuire and McCall pushed Dapp's car without any success, then they told the detective that they could not give further assistance.

An argument started. Both fell to the ground during the ensuing struggle. Then McCall stopped the battle. It was reported that no blows had been exchanged.

Dapp was then taken to the police station and charged with disorderly conduct.

But there was no hearing—which is especially interesting in view of the Mayor's recent pronouncement that police and firemen, when arrested, should be treated as anyone else is treated.

M'NAIR'S DENIAL ENDS SUIT STEP

E. N. Jones, state director of NRA, has decided to drop the idea of a suit against Mayor McNair.

The Mayor, through his attorney, has denied that he made the remarks attributed to him. Among the items at which Jones took offense were that William A. Magee, as Mayor, fired Jones as Police Superintendent and that David L. Lawrence attempted to induce McNair to appoint Jones as Safety Director.

In a formal statement Director Jones says:

"In view of the fact that Mayor William N. McNair, through his attorney, has formally denied making the defamatory statements alleged to have been made about me by him at a recent luncheon of the Henry George Club, I consider the incident closed."

Congress Puffed While Roosevelt Did All the Work

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

Congress sure has earned its vacation. Mr. Roosevelt did the work and Congress did the puffing.

Four hundred beneficial public acts were passed in two sessions. Senator Norris complained that he was so rushed he often voted for a pig in a poke.

The Senator said we are passing legislation without knowing what is in it.

Which may not be parliamentary, but it is sporting! If the people don't know anything about a bill why should the Senators?

The boys will now go back to the home states and frank their laundry the other way.

The primaries are about due and the Republicans are making a rush for the lifeboats. And one thing the Democrats will not stand for is mutiny.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh's Society Happenings

In Mayfair —With— Patricia Pitt

There's to be an attractive benefit, an annual affair, for the Glenshaw Free Library, to be given Friday evening, June 29, at 8 o'clock, on the lawn of the Dan E. Tatoms, Glenshaw. The benefit's to be an old-fashioned concert in costume, with the costume heirlooms in the neighborhood, and a playlet, "The Photograph Album."

And the wide porch of the Tatom home will be the stage, the lawn the "house" for the audience. And there'll be refreshments, good old-fashioned ice cream and cake after the concert and the play.

Isobel Young Sheppard Married on Saturday

An interesting wedding Saturday was that of Isobel Young Sheppard, attractive daughter of Mrs. Thomas Howe Sheppard, of Denniston avenue, and James Barr Haines IV, son of the James Barr Hainses the III, of Sewickley, which took place at 8:30 o'clock in the evening in the home of the bride's brother-in-law and sister, the junior George Piersol Murrays, of Bridgeville.

Officiating was the Rev. Joseph C. Hamilton, of the Sixth United Presbyterian Church, before a pre-dieu having ferns and pink hydrangeas as a background.

The bride chose a white satin gown having a high cowl neckline in front, a row of satin-covered buttons down the back of the bodice. The long sleeves ended in points over the hands, and the skirt had a brief train. Her veil was of tulle, cascading from a coronet of rose point lace and orange blossoms. She carried gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Mousseline De Soie Worn by Attendants

Helen MacCloskey as maid of honor was in blue mousseline de soie, fashioned with a deep cape collar forming sleeves, and carried pink gladioli and blue delphinium.

Similar gowns of peach mousseline de soie were worn by the bridesmaids, Claire Haines and Olive McClelland. Their flowers were peach gladioli and blue delphinium.

Golf-Garden Subject of Debate

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

The burning question as to whether 36 holes in the garden are more beneficial than 36 holes of golf, is to be settled by the Penn-Hebron branch of the Women's National Farm and Garden Association at its July 5 meeting. Dr. N. L. Morrow and C. H. Long will uphold the golf side of the controversy and Mrs. S. G. Dunning and Miss Maude Wilson will point out the benefits of the gardening.

Another feature of interest that night—it's to be an evening meeting on account of the men—will be the debut of the club quartet, Mrs. Howard Morrow, Mrs. E. S. Henry, Mrs. E. D. West and Mrs. B. E. Kimmel. A trip to the clubhouse in Jefferson road is an interesting experience, for there you will see hand-hewn beams that were placed in the old building more than 100 years ago and held together by the wooden pegs that were in use in those pre-nail days.

The clubhouse, which was originally a barn on the Joseph Morrow place, has been clapboarded on the outside, and the women have added to the initial cost of $1,200 almost $4,000 in improvements. A hardwood floor has been put in, an entrance built, windows and doors, a stage and dressing rooms and veranda that commands a marvelous view for miles in almost every direction, have been added. The basement floor is nicely cemented and there's an excellent heating system, too, and now the next improvement will be the addition of a kitchen.

The club members owe only $900 on their property and to raise the money, they have, according to their president, Mrs. Harry K. Reiter, "done everything but steal it." The club is incorporated.

GIRL IN THE FAMILY' :-: Torn Between Loyalty and Love, Which Does Susan Choose? :-: By Beatrice Burton

CHAPTER XIII.

The clock in the reception room struck once for half past eight as she turned back into the hall . . . Half past eight. Supper would be over at the Cullens by this time, and John and Mr. Sholes would probably be out in the kitchen helping the girls with the dishes. They would be laughing and talking, having a fine invigorating time. Mary would be looking very domestic with her sleeves rolled up on her white arms, as she washed dishes, and her eyes would shine like emeralds under the unshaded kitchen lights.

A little after eleven she heard John and Mr. Sholes come up the stairs together, and a minute afterward John tapped on her door. "I saw that your light was on," he said, when she opened it, "and I thought that you might like to start this tonight. Mary sent it to you."

He handed her a new novel of Hugh Walpole's. Mary often sent new books over to her when they came in to the library.

"How did Mr. Sholes and the Cullens get on?" she asked.

"Like a house afire," John laughed. "Old Mary certainly went after him in a big way. She got out her banjo and went through the whole book of blues for him, and Sara made waffles and coffee just before we left. He had a darned good time, and I was sure glad after the awful icing that the family gives him around this house."

Susan went back to bed and opened the Walpole book. But she did not read it. She lay thinking about Mary Cullen . . . No doubt Mary had a way with men. A flirtatious way of sweeping her long eyelashes up and down at them like Becky Sharp, a friendly way of asking them all about themselves and then sitting back to listen with wide-eyed interest when they answered her. But there was more to her than just a little bag of coquettish tricks. She was really entertaining with her banjo and her husky voice. She talked well and she had a good laugh. Almost any man would think her an unusually pleasant companion even if she had no beauty at all.

Mary a Rival

Besides her own attractions, she had the attractions of the Cullen house for a background, Susan went on thinking. Aunt Nell's pantry was always filled with delicious things to eat, and there was a radio, a piano and a phonograph, for music if the young people wanted to dance. Aunt Nell and Uncle Arthur usually spent the evening upstairs in the sitting room, too, so that the girls and their friends had the whole lower floor to themselves. It would have been remarkable if Mr. Sholes had not had a good time there after the wintry airs of the Center street house.

"I could be interesting to him, too, if I had half a chance," thought Susan. "Even if I can't play the banjo like a darkey."

For the first time in her life something like a feeling of dislike of Mary crept into her heart—of Mary who had always been her favorite Cullen. Mary had so many admirers. Why had she had to reach out after Mr. Sholes?—Just another scalp for her belt—

All at once it flashed across Susan's mind that she was thinking of Mary Cullen as her rival. Why, it was none of her affair what Mary did or did not do to fascinate Mr. Sholes! The best thing she could do was to put them both out of her mind and go to sleep.

At the breakfast table on Christmas morning Susan opened Wallace's Christmas package. Inside the gold paper was a gray jeweler's box and inside the box was a neat little wrist watch set with bagouette diamonds.

"My word! But he's simply showering you with diamonds, Childie!" Lutie cried when she saw it. "It matches the ring, doesn't it? He probably got them both at the same place."

Put on Present

She picked up the lid of the gray box. "This came from Sigler's," she said. "Is that where he bought the ring?"

"I don't know." Susan snapped the bracelet around her wrist . . . Some day she would ask Wallace about the ring box from the Ludlow and Ludlow store.

"We aren't giving you a real present this year, Susan," Lutie said, getting up from the table, "because you'll have to have so many things for your trousseau. But your Aunt Edna and I went up into the attic the other day and got together some of your mother's things that we thought you'd like to have now that you're going to have a home of your own."

She took a large pasteboard box from the top of the sideboard that ran almost the entire length of the dining room wall and set it down in front of Susan. It was tied with holly-patterned ribbon, and it was filled to the top with linen. Tablecloths and napkins, all of them monogrammed with the letter "C." They were yellow with time, but they were smooth and glossy as if they had been ironed the day before. On the very top of them was a flat blue velvet case which revealed a row of silver teaspoons when Susan took off the cover.

"Why, those are my things!" From the opposite side of the table Susan's father lifted his voice in surprise and indignation. He half rose in his chair and his angry glance went quickly from Aunt Edna's face to Lutie's. "Those are mine—to give away or not to give away, as I see fit."

Aunt Edna looked at him, her lips parted in an O of astonishment. "Why, Morris, you don't have any use for these things," she said, "and they were Susan's mother's. They're all marked with a 'C' for Cullen.

Going to Marry

Morris Broderick smiled, his small dark mustache lifting to show his full red lips. He was much smarter than usual this morning, with a wing collar and a white piping in his vest.

"As a matter of fact, I am going to have a use for them," he said. "Mrs. Hopper and I are going to be married tomorrow afternoon."

He glanced around the table to see how everyone was taking his news before he went on:

"The children are grown now, John's earning his own living, and Susan's going to be married, so at last I feel free to live my own life."

"You do, do you?" This was from Aunt Edna. "Well, that is certainly a priceless remark, coming from you! Just tell me when you've ever done anything for either of the children, Morris Broderick! They've been my job for 15 or 16 long years, and don't you forget it! You've been as free as a bachelor!—Once in a while you've told John to stick to his college career, but just try to recollect a single dollar that you ever gave him for it—"

"Who fed him and kept a roof over his head?" interrupted his father. "I didn't, I suppose?"

"Well let's not do all this fussing on 'Christmas day in the morning'," begged Lutie, showing most of her teeth in one of her brightest and most strained smiles. "I think we've all helped to bring up John and Susan, and we've done a beautiful job with them. They're nice children—but this news about you and Mrs. Hopper, Morris! It's wonderful!—And you know they say all good things come in threes, so now that you and Susan are getting married, maybe I'll be the next one to find a mate. Stranger things have happened!"

Synopsis

Lovely Susan Broderick lives in the old family mansion with her father, Morris, brother John, Uncle Worthy, his wife, Edna, and a spinster aunt, Lutie. Although they have lost their wealth the old folks live in a dream world of social prominence. They feel humiliated when it is necessary to take in a "paying guest." The family wonders what Susan's fiance, Wallace Steffen, young banker, will think. John does not like Wallace. While Susan is waiting for Wallace, Mr. Sholes, the roomer, arrives. Uncle Worthy reprimands her for talking with Sholes. Wallace presents Susan with a diamond and sapphire ring. Later, Susan comes upon the jeweler's box, stamped with the name of a firm long out of business. The Brodericks objected to Suan and John being friendly with their late mother's relatives, the Cullens. Susan tells Cousin Mary about Sholes. Wallace leaves on trip.

SUMMER IS OPEN SEASON FOR BUDGETS

The laced shoulders and the high patch pockets jack up this swell, classic two-piece white crepe sports costume. Lacings and belt are lipstick red.

Chartreuse chiffon is used for this very cool summer formal frock which has a fluttery ruffle-bustle jabot on its graceful skirt. The pinches that drape the shoulder wings are a new idea. The front decolletage hits a nice hot weather low.

By PRUNELLA WOOD

THE CANNY budgeteer knows the value of having a lot of moderate priced dresses in her closet to see her through the hot months. There is nothing more disheartening than having to "get the good" out of a couple of extravagant dresses, when one's humid soul longs for a flock of crisp, fresh duds, ready to the hand. Having your "other" dress at the cleaners is enough to break a heart.

* * *

ONE DARKISH silk crepe for the street is indispensable, but one may alternate it with light spectator sports frock quite comfortably, and the hegiras for country week-ends are undertaken more easily than if one stocked up with a lot of dark clothes and one snappy light outfit. In between these two types of comfortable summer frocks is the model of washable silk which is checked or striped with bright color on a white ground. Tailored models are good, made of silk seersucker, printed foulard, or string.

COTTON DRESSES and suits look prettier and more sophisticated this summer than ever before. Perfectly good models come for the price of a theater ticket, models which will tub and tub, and still stay shapely.

Dimity, linen both thin and thick, gingham, printed voile, seersucker and shirting materials, are all to be had in trig tailored outfits, while dotted Swiss and embroidered muslin comes in models that are quite festive enough to go to tea or the afternoon bridge circle.

BOOSTING YOUR COOKING VOCABULARY

When we were in school—remember?—we used to try to add two or three or maybe four words a day to our vocabularies. We'd keep a list and at the end of the term the one with the longest list got a prize from teacher.

Adding to your cooking vocabulary is much the same thing. It must be done with conscious effort. Just as some words sound strange and unpleasant to us after one using, recipes, too, do not especially appeal in mere printed form, yet when made up are delightfully delicious.

Make a rule of trying at least one of the prize recipes daily. You might even informally organize your friends and neighbors so that each one of you tries a different recipe. In this way you can get edible proof of the winner's appeal.

The return in the added variety and quality of your meals will be prize enough, and you'll have a recipe file that will be of lifetime value to you.

Start in today both clipping and submitting recipes. All recipes entered for a $5 or a $1 prize should be sent to Prudence Penny, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. No recipes are returned.

'Stock Pot' for Soups

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

When there are several persons to be fed each day, there should always be a stock pot. Then, good soups are sure to be part of the menu.

Stock, of course, is the foundation of most soups. It may be made with fresh bones or cooked ones, with any trimmings of meat, vegetables and so forth. The bones should be broken small and put with a little salt into cold water, along with any trimmings of meat, bacon rind. It should be brought to the boil and then skimmed free of fat and foam. After it has simmered for about two hours, put in any vegetables raw or cooked. Then cover the pot tightly and let it simmer gently.

To clear the stock for soup use, first remove every vestige of fat from the stock, waiting till it is cold, when all the fat will be caked on the surface. Then put the stock in a saucepan with the whites and shells of two eggs beaten together. Whisk till the stock boils. Then let it stand near the flame, not touching it for ten minutes. Then scald a clean piece of linen in boiling water.

Then lay this over a sieve across a large bowl and pour the stock through it.

Meat soups should be cooked for a long time and very slowly. Make these soups with cold water. Skim carefully. Quicker cooking is the thing for vegetable soups. Use boiling water. Do not skim.

This is the season when sundry would-be Hiawathas are on the war-path. And if the Comanche yell is being re-echoed through your house, or the cat in danger of being scalped, get your "red-skins" a holster set and send them out to the woods. One of the stores has a few they've reduced from $1.00 . . . to 39c . . . of genuine leather belt (with three "bullets") holster, cuffs and gun. Beloved of all little boys.

Not being Pocahontas, you can't plunk your papoose into a rawhide pack on your back and keep him quiet that way! But modern Pocahontases are doing equally well for themselves with the new metal chair that has appeared for babies.

It is low . . . constructed along lines similar to those used in new porch and lawn furniture . . . and responds to every movement of the baby (very comfortable). A canvas back, seat, and tray cover complete it . . . with the inevitable playheads strung across the front. In apple green . . . at $3.95.

Memos from a Columnist's Girl Friday.

New York: Dear W.: Drives me a little koo-koo trying to decipher some of the garbled teletyping . . . Couldn't make any sense out of the Laemmle thing in Private Papers, and your arithmetic on the expense account of G. Fowler needs a rehearsal . . . Also you were ten lines short for Thursday column—why don't you answer my wires? . . . Carl Randall was married to a girl from Monte Carlo . . . That o Texas ranger (his name is Griffin) who caught Dillinger sh one raid some time ago is old the Concourse Plaza—but o one knows it! . . . Claire tur indsor is all fussed over your lo ne about Clair Hampton Windsor, she wants to know who that Windsor is . . . Is it any of her business?

She is distressed also about a report elsewhere that she and a J. O'Gorman are torrid—she says it is strictly palship, etc. . . War vets of Allegheny County, Pittsburgh, were in to thank you for all the nice boosts for the vets everywhere . . . You sent too many paragraphs for the gag col'm . Say something swell about Evelyn Chandler, the ice skater at the Black Forest Village at the Chicago Fair, she's marvelous!

Here's something other communities can copy . . . In a driveway of the Kenmore Hotel, White Lake, N. Y., they have a sign reading: "Drive slowly. We love our children" . . . Connie Carpenter and Fontana are clicking at the Riviera . . . I hear that Patricia Lee, who declared on the witness stand that she was going to marry James Dunn, lost her divorce suit, and it is anticipated her husband will start an alienation action . . . Dunn, by the way, has a peach of an idea for radio—shall I tell John Royal?

Several complaints, and I don't blame them, because of that movie interview in which real ages of femme stars were published—making it look as though you supplied them . . . The story stated that they were taken from the almanac, but you know how often even that worthy publication gums up dates . . . I have written some of the actresses who wrote in—that you didn't have anything to do with it—but the magazine thought it would be "typically you" etc. . . . That's what you get for helping some interviewers—and for no money, yet! . . . Is it true that someone walked up to you the other day and looking at your grey head said: "Oooh, I see a dark hair, can I pull it out?" . . . Veddy, veddy, ka-yute.

You're not missing a thing in New York—the usual June slump has set in—except on week-ends at the country spots—and if you want to keep your pals—don't keep writing about how cool the nights are out there—the nights here when the humidity stifles us—are terrifying . . . Allan Cross and Henry Dunn were on with Vallee for the third time in seven weeks, which is some sort of a record, . . . That girl's letter recently about her chorus boy husband, who gave her such a deal, drew a nasty letter from him—anonymous, of course . . . I threw it away . . . Jack Osterman says Warner's are making a short of Anthony Adverse. Jack calls it the height of optimism.

Did you send that miniature biog to Editor Draper of the Litdige? . . . How about the Mirror's own Lou Hanlon doing a sketch? . . . I didn't think in time to shift the Billy La Hiff paragraph (yours, not Jim's) when I shifted the gig pillar. Sorry . . . The big alley certainly gave Billy a grand goodbye . . . You were the only one missing . . . I mean in person . . . If you can get an interview with that boy who murdered his mother and brother, do so . . . On second thought, wait until just before the trial starts next month.

Just heard this . . . That a Hollywood actor had a date with Dorothy Dell the night she was killed . . . It slipped his mind, so the next morning he walked into the casting office to ask her phone number, so he could phone her to apologize . . . It was then he learned of her death . . . Shocked beyond expression, he stumbled back to the set and went into a comedy scene . . . That's show business for you, what? . . . Mrs. F. Loeffler, of Forest Hills, submits the following about a Quaker lady, who was asked what gave her such a lovely complexion and what cosmetics she use . . . She replied: "I use Truth for the lips . . . Prayer for the voice . . . Pity for the eyes . . . Charity for the hands . . . Uprighteousness for the figure and Love for the heart."

Hey, wanna do something for a few guys named Sherman Rogers? . . . Well, there are three of them in New York and they get into each other's hair . . . One is with a magazine and it isn't his real name and that fact bothers the other two . . . The second is an attorney, reputable, too . . . The third is 28 and an ad exec. . . . They'd like your clearing up the matter . . . Neil McCarthy says Broadway is a street where the feller who shines your shoes in the morning—very likely will be stepping on them at midnight . . . Nadine Alexander will play the second lead in a Parisian made film—don't know when she's leaving town . . . Is it true in Bernie's picture that they try to make it look like you and Bernie are really bitter enemies? . . . I hear outside of Ben's performance it's not so good, anyway—so nobody'll see it.

Cobb a Ham, His Wife Wires

By JIMMY STARR

HOLLYWOOD, June 18.—Hello! When Mrs. Irvin Cobb heard that hubby had become a movie actor for Hal Roach she wired the following:

"I always knew you were a ham at heart, and it's about time the public found it out!"

And now for the news nifties of the day—Jock Whitney, who is to finance a series of productions to be made with the new three-color process, is seeking Fred Astaire for a special, in which the noted laddie of the nimble feet will incorporate many of his own pet ideas. Aside from starring in "Gay Divorce," "Ringstrasse," "Radio Revels" and "Roberta" for RKO, Fred hasn't much ahead of him. He'll have to sandwich-in the Whitney production. If you're interested in statistics—Fred has danced 200,000 miles, wearing out 1,000 pairs of dancing boots.

Victor Moore has made such a hit a Universal he's been given a role in "Gift of Gab," which Karl Freund (instead of Richard Thorpe) will direct. They say Vic's "a male Zasu Pitts."

Warners' failed to pick up Paul Kaye's option. Three hours later he had signed with Universal for a spot role in "Romance in the Rain."

Roger Pryor joins Russ Columbo and June Knight in "Wake Up and Dream" for Universal.

Griffith to megaphone "No More Ladies," due to postponement of "Biography" because Ford has hopped off for Cleveland, where he's scheduled to do a play . . . Sol M. Wurtzel, producing for Fox, is dusting off "The Giant Swing." W. R. Burnett's novel, which has been tried by nearly every writer in the movie village . . . Nick Stuart and Gloria Shea are going places together . . . If Eddie Hillman had his way, it would be wedding bells for Irene Harvey.

Sleuth Role Route to Success

It takes a detective to find the shortest road to success in motion pictures.

This was proven by many brilliant stage and screen actors who have received their acclaim from the public through their portrayals of detective roles.

The latest of these is William Powell, who again rises to the heights of popularity in another detective portrayal—that of the super-sleuth, Nick Charles, in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer - Cosmopolitan picture, "The Thin Man," based on Dashiell Hammett's novel, now running serially in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

However, it is not the first sleuthing characterization that Powell has presented to the screen. Though he has scored many hits in the roles of polite gentleman crooks and stern civic officials, he won his greatest success in pictures as Philo Vance.

William Gillette achieved his greatest success on the stage as Sherlock Holmes, while John Barrymore and Clive Brook list among their finest performances screen versions of the Sherlock Holmes character.

Powell, as Nick Charles, presents one of the most amusing detectives yet seen upon the screen. He has retired from the business of catching crooks, has married a wealthy woman, and—against his will—is dragged into a most perplexing case. Eventually he solves it.

Directed by W. S. Van Dyke, Powell has the support in "The Thin Man" of Myrna Loy, Maureen O'Sullivan, Porter Hall, Nat Pendleton, Minna Gombell and Henry Wadsworth.

MERCER, Pa., June 18.—(AP.)—State engineers reported that several releases of 20,000,000 gallons of water each have been made from the new Pymatuning Dam reservoir to relieve deficiencies in the Shenango River. They said the releases were asked by industries in the Shenango Valley.

March Sees Need Of Style Czar

Fredric March believes Hollywood should have a men's style arbiter.

"What we need," he said, "is the equivalent of an Omar Khayyam or an Adrien, a professional fashion arbiter to put new spirit in our sadly somber, unimaginative wardrobes."

The male fashion expert should not be an actor, he thinks, but should hold prestige enough as a dresser to set up what constitutes good form. He nominates Adolph Menjou for the post, if he could give up acting.

March, himself, has no clothes problems just now as he is playing Robert Browning to Norma Shearer's Elizabeth Barrett in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street."

All In A Day

By MARK HELLINGER

Achievement.

HENRY DODGE was much like any one of a million other men of his age. He had a drab job, an uninteresting wife and dreams of some day becoming a very rich man.

Henry did a little more than dreaming on that score, however. He had a definite plan as to how he was going to become rich. And that was by inventing something. If the plan wasn't exactly original, neither was the man himself.

He had a workshop fitted up in the cellar. Every evening and on Saturday afternoons he fooled around with tools and pieces of steel and wires. When it became too late to work any longer, he returned upstairs and talked about his invention to his wife.

"Look, Josie," he would point out, "this is the time when men are gettin' rich and famous with inventions. Look at Edison. Look at all them guys that invented radio and telephones and stuff. True, I ain't hit on anything like that yet. But I will. Some day we're gonna be rich. You wait and see."

Josie waited. There wasn't much else she could do. For twenty years she listened patiently and said little.

Henry was fifty when he lost his job in the machine shop. If he had devoted more energy to his work and less to his invention, he mightn't have been laid off. But at that moment he was engrossed "in something big."

It was Josie who did most of the worrying.

"You better be looking around for something else," she told him. "The money goes fast when you're not working.

"I know you think you're working. I know you got a lot of faith in what you're doing. But faith doesn't pay the bills and put eats in the ice box.

"Why don't you run down tomorrow and see Judd about getting your job back in the shop? Even if you get less than you did, it'll be something. In times like these, every penny means a lot. You will look around for a paying job, won't you, Henry?"

Her husband nodded. But it is doubtful if he even heard her.

He spent more and more time in the cellar. Day and night, he was hunched over his work bench. And then at last the invention was finished. All he had to do now was to sell it. Josie watched with a heavy heart as Henry sent away a big slice of their precious hoard for the patent.

"We'll lose our house and everything," she protested tearfully. "They've been lenient so far, but this time we won't even be able to pay the interest on the mortgage. You wouldn't want for us to lose our home, would you, Henry?"

"There," he comforted her. "Everything's gonna be all right. Didn't I tell you not to worry? We're gonna be rich, soon's I get this placed. You just wait and see."

But this time Josie didn't wait. She was tired and nervous, and she had decided to go out of town for a while to visit her sister. She told Henry gently that he wouldn't need her for a few weeks. There was a little money put aside. He should have that. When he got over his foolishness about the invention and found a way to support them, she would come back.

"It'll be no time," Henry nodded reassuringly. "I got a man interested right now."

That was true. Days of waiting around in reception rooms hadn't been entirely useless. The head of a large manufacturing firm had promised to see him next week.

He glanced up at the other man's eager face.

"I suppose you'd like this in cash," he smiled. "I know how it is—your first bit of luck. Come, we'll go down to the bank."

Henry mumbled gratefully, "Thanks." . . .

At the bank, they tried to prevail on Henry to put his money on deposit. But Henry would have none of that. He wanted it where he could touch it and feel it and show it to Josie. He was going after her that night.

When Henry got home, he locked the money away carefully in a strong box. With it was a pattern of his invention. He was eager to show that to Josie. Then he rushed down to the station, a full hour ahead of train time.

Josie was very glad to come home. She had missed him, she said. And now she was happy that their worries were over at last and that the mortgage could be paid. They rode back on the train, and to Henry, the trip seemed endless.

Tomorrow, he told his wife, they would buy a new car. Life was going to be one sweet song after this.

It was very late when they arrived home. At their front door, they stood frozen in their tracks and stared at each other. The door had been forced open. Someone had broken in during thier absence.

Henry rushed to the bedroom where he had hidden the strong box. It was empty. The money that he had received for his life work was gone, nad now there was nothing left for him and Josie.

She tried to comfort him. She tried to take his mind off his loss by asking about his invention.

"What was it, anyway, Henry?" she inquired. "Must have been something pretty important if they'd pay you so much for it."

Henry nodded wryly.

"It was a lock," he explained. "A burglar-proof lock." . . .

GIRL, FRIEND HIT BY AUTO ON HIGHWAY

James Clark, 18, and Edna Chyet, 17, were in Haddon Hospital today recovering from injuries received when they were struck by an automobile on the Steubenville Pike near their home yesterday. County detectives said the machine that hit the two was driven by J. E. Donovan, of Glendale.

The collision of a car driven by John Dixon, 31, of 3939 Minitwood street, and a dairy truck at Liberty avenue and Thirtieth street, resulted in lacerations and contusions of the arms and head for Dixon yesterday, police reported. He was treated at St. Francis Hospital.

When an open door of a car in which he was riding caught on a pole, Lawrence Collins, 20, of Edgerton avenue, was thrown to the street and severely injured yesterday. Taken to Montefiore Hospital, he was found to have a broken ankle and head wounds. The accident occurred in Wright's way, South Side.

GREEN ROOM GLEANINGS

The theme line of the "Dr. Monica" advertising campaign is "Life Owes Me a Baby" . . . Oh, Mr. Hays! . . . "Snake-Hips" Tucker, coming to the Penn Friday with Duke Ellington's band, owns the most colorful nickname to hit show business since the days of "Sugarfoot" Gaffney, Neil O'Brien's blazing minstrel dancer . . . The Adolph Menjou-Verree Teasdale bridal home is ready . . . Cupid continued his Hollywood capers when Phillips Holmes met Florence Rice as she alighted from the plane from New York . . . And Jack Oakie's latest interest is Toby Wing . . . Before I forget to remind you, don't fail to sit in on that marvelous little George Breakston boy who has the lead in "No Greater Glory," one of the year's finest films, coming to the Warner Thursday . . . Reginald Stanborough, Mike Cullen's flaxen-haired secretary, is an amateur thespian of note . . . Al Jolson dyes his gray hair black—and admits it! . . . Bruce Cabot got his first film start as a kiss tester . . . George Arliss is an Episcopalian, which should settle those arguments . . . Bert Stern is home from United Artists' Chicago convention.

Ira Cohn, Pittsburgh Fox Exchange manager, back from his company's sales meeting, is telling this one about Shirley Temple, which he heard from the boys from the Coast . . . It seems that Shirley was invited to an executive's dinner, and when she arrived she shook hands with those she knew and walked between her father and mother to the chairman at the head of the table . . . "I'm Shirley Temple and only yesterday Daddy was saying he wondered whether any of those bozos over here would invite him," she said simply . . . Raymond Barry, former Pitt and Fulton usher, wants it known that he is the business manager of John Danko, latest flagpole sitting threat to Shipwreck Kelly . . . Jimmy Dunn has acquired a double chin and the cameramen are not being so good to Ginger Rogers . . . "Dames," the new Dick Powell flicker, is due in July, as is "Dubarry," with Dolores Del Rio . . . Both are Stanley bookings . . . Joe Schenck and Darryl Zanuck almost split after Zanuck made "Broadway Thru a Keyhole," "Blood Money" and "Advice to the Lovelorn" . . . then Zanuck hit his stride, although the release of "Born to Be Bad" was held up for months . . . "House of Strangers," Von Stroheim's comeback effort, is now called "Fugitive Road."

Gus Edwards, the grand old man of Broadway, sends his regards to Pittsburgh friends, especially Gene Connelly, who managed the old Grand and Davis when vaudeville was vaudeville . . . And Gene, recalling Gus' "Kid Kabaret" in the Grand, when Eddie Cantor was a shy little kid in blackface, and Georgie Jessel, also with the act, "didn't have much to do" . . . Which recalls the marvelous tribute that Jessel paid to Gus only a few weeks ago when an attempted vaudeville revival failed at the Casino Varieties Theater in New York . . . Very touching it was, too, as the orchestra softly played "School Days" during Jessel's monologue . . . Jim McWilliams, one of the biggest favorites among the Davis "singles" in the old days, dropped in on Connelly last week from his Virginia Beach home . . . Jim, who graduated from Ohio State with Frank Crumit, is contemplating taking up the radio, which is about all that is left for those old stalwarts of the two-a-day . . . Art Levy, Columbia's Pittsburgh exchange boss, leaves for his firm's convention in a day or two . . . Junior Bernstein is resting after showing Bob Murphy, Phil Spitalny's funny man, the sights of the town last week.

Mike Cullen's "Little Miss Marker" preview for the newspaper folks is set for Wednesday evening at 8 in the Warner screening room . . . Duke Ellington will play a midnight show in the Penn Sunday . . . Those eight lassies in the new Panchon and Marco revue in the William Penn's Urban Room are causing plenty of eyebrow raising among the stay-up-lates . . . Manny Greenwald got one of the prize United Artists exploitation jobs of the summer when the home office shipped him to Chicago last night to handle the popular run of "The House of Rothschild" . . . Bob Newkirk, Penn treasurer, shopping for shoes for the Missus, now out on crutches after breaking her foot . . . Add box-office naturals: Jean Harlow in "Born to be Kissed" . . . Mae West had to pad certain spots to convincingly play a baby vamp in a Broadway show before she went to Hollywood . . . A number to look forward to is Busby Berkeley's "Eyes For You" in "Dames" . . . The Warners are planning a talkie version of that old silent masterpiece, "Captain Blood," which is good news . . . John H. Harris returned home yesterday after attending the Baer-Carnera mix-up with Dick Powell in New York . . . Stepin Fetchit went back to Hollywood with a Harlem haircut.

The William Penn, Harris movie house on the North Side, is to be completely reseated and redecorated . . . The late Dorothy Dell made three attempts to duck the re-take deadline on "Shoot the Works" so that she could get away on her vacation, and failed! . . . Mary Pickford denies she will run for Congress . . . What has become of Charlie King, the hero of "The Broadway Melody"? . . . Margaret Sullivan will do the Helen Hayes role in Universal's screening of Molnar's "The Good Fairy," which Gilbert Miller opened in this town a few seasons ago . . . Marion Davies' "Operator 13" gave the Penn its biggest straight picture opening in months . . . The coming of "No Greater Glory" will give Frank Borzage two high class productions on local screens at the same time, the other being "Little Man, What Now?" . . . John Harkrider, whose sketches for "Ming Toy," which Ziegfeld was planning to produce when he died, hang in the theater named after the Old Master in New York, will be technical art adviser for the screen of "The Great Ziegfeld" . . . And the "Extra" girl once more rises to remark: Give some show girls an inch, and they wouldn't wear it, anyway! . . . Flash—Pennsylvania Censor Board holds up "Dr. Monica!"

RAIN PREVENTS THIRD GAME OF BUC-GIANT SERIES

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Strong Slab Staffs Rare. Changes in Pro Football. New Rules Considered.

If the average home fan feels disappointed and sore about the continued feeble showing of the Pirates—and there is no doubt that he does, with a world of justification—what must be the feelings of President Bill Benswanger, who, after going to great trouble and expense to put a powerful ball club in the hands of Manager Gibson, sees the aggregation performing like a lot of sandlotters and making faster progress toward the bottom than to the top? After losing seven of their last eight games, beating only the Dodgers for the lone victory, the Corsairs today were only one point above fifth place.

W. E. Benswanger

The fielding is faulty, the pitching is worse; a total of 31 men left on bases in the last three games shows the impotency of the hitters; the strategy and coaching have been bad and there is a total absence of spirit. If you can think of anything else that might be wrong with a losing club, you may safely add it to the list of existing Buccaneer defects. Every club is bound to have off spells at times, but there can be no excuse for half-hearted effort, or a lack of life and spirit, particularly against rival pennant contenders when the team should be fighting hardest and showing more of a will to win.

MUST BRACE OR FACE DRASTIC CHANGES

The Bucs, with Freddie Lindstrom's return to the lineup apparently due, have the playing strength to snap out of their slump and get back in the running, but it can't be made to count without the right spirit. They owe a lot more of the latter to the fans who have remained loyal, as well as to their employers.

There has got to be more life in the club immediately, and if Manager Gibson can't arouse the players and get better results, President Benswanger, with whom patience soon must cease to be a virtue, will be justified in taking matters into his own hands and making some drastic changes in the picture. It would be folly to continue the present system if it does not improve pronto.

FEW CLUBS BOAST TWO WINNING HURLERS

Developments in the major league pennant races so far have brought observing critics to the conclusion that this season is one in which there are no pitching staffs. That is, staffs that are winners as a whole, such as the combination of Hubbell, Schumacher, Parmelee and Fitzsimmons that carried the Giants through to the pennant and the world championship last year. About the closest approach to a winning corps is boasted by the Cardinals. The addition of Paul Dean, who won his first seven games, to his brother Dizzy and Tex Carleton, gave the Redbirds a formidable set of slabmen, even with Bill Hallahan not winning at his old clip.

Paul Dean

Few of the other clubs in the big show, apart from the Giants with Hubbell and Schumacher, own even two steady winners. The Pirates do not possess even one real standout. The slipping of Lonnie Warneke after a great start left the Cubs with only Guy Bush as a consistent winner. Fred Frankhouse alone has delivered steadily for the Braves. The Dodgers have only Van Mungo, while the Phils and Reds have nobody. The Indians promised to be outstanding on the hill in the American League, but during the last few weeks a Cleveland pitcher going the distance was the exception rather than the rule. Only Pearson has won more than five games. Beyond Fred Marberry and Tommy Bridges, the Tiger pitchers have not made impressive records. It looks as though Lefty Gomez will have to continue to do the bulk of the winning for the Yankees, unless a couple of youngsters, Johnny Murphy and Johnny Broaca, continue the good work they have done to date. Monte Weaver is about the only really good bet for the Senators. The Browns have been getting good work out of Buck Newsom and George Blaeholder, but two men do not make a staff. The Red Sox and A's have no outstanding hurlers, and the only winner for the White Sox has been 42-year-old Sam Jones.

PRO FOOTBALL MAY BE EVEN MORE OPEN

Football followers in Pittsburgh and other cities in the National Professional League are awaiting the league meeting in New York on June 30 and July 1 with particular interest because some important changes suggested in the playing rules are to be considered. In competing with college football for the patronage of the fans, the pros may make their game even more open next fall than it was in 1933, though already their rules allow forward passes from any point behind the line of scrimmage, the goal posts are on the goal line, a player may run with a blocked kick, there is no dead ball regulation, and flying tackles and blocks are O. K.

As many as 10 further changes are up for consideration, some of them with a chance for adoption. One would allow the defensive team to advance a recovered fumble, except in the case of a fumbled lateral pass. Another would have incomplete lateral passes governed by the same rules as incomplete forwards, and a third would put the ball in play on the 30-yard line instead of the 20 after a touchback, in order to encourage running plays rather than immediate kicking out of danger.

WOULD LET SUBSTITUTE TALK AT ONCE

Among the additional changes to be considered by President Joe Carr's league is one that would permit a player entering the contest as a sub to talk with his mates immediately instead of being required to wait until one play has been completed. Two others would reduce the time-out period from two minutes to one, and cut the time between halves from 15 minutes to 10. It is proposed also that the league adopt the college rule on incomplete forward passes over the goal line, with the amendment that the one pass not counting as a touchback must originate from a play starting on or inside the 20-yard line.

Joe Carr

Further, officials would have to notify the team coaches when the three time-out privileges in each half have been used; an incomplete forward pass not crossing the line of scrimmage would be nothing more than an old-fashioned fumble, and for a foul at any point within the 10-yard line the defense could be penalized a maximum of only half the distance to the goal line, instead of five yards. A proposal to reinstate the onside kick is not liked by the coaches, but most of them are said to favor the adoption of the majority of the other suggestions. And when the pros see something which they think would improve the game, there's no haggling or fussing. They go right ahead and adopt the change.

HOW THE REFEREE SAVED BAER FROM HIMSELF IN THIRD ROUND .... MAX TRIED TO HIT CARNERA WITH LATTER ON THE FLOOR, WHICH WOULD HAVE LOST FOR HIM ON A FOUL

This is the third and final series of clips from the official moving pictures of the Max Baer-Primo Carnera world heavyweight championship fight, published exclusively in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph by arrangement with the International News Photograph Service and Harry O. Voller. It reveals how Baer almost paid the penalty for violating the rule which calls for a boxer to retire to the farthest neutral corner when he scores a knockdown. Baer refused to do this in the early rounds and he was furious when Referee Arthur Donovan pushed him away during this action in the third round, until he realized that the official had saved him from committing a foul which would have brought his automatic disqualification with the title in his grasp.

TRAFFIC CLUB GOLF EVENT ON TODAY

By TOM BIRKS

The only local golf tourney scheduled for today finds the Traffic and Transportation organization congregating at the Crafton Golf Club for its second tourney of the season. The organization holds one event each month.

Jerry Lynch, popular professional at the Crafton club, has planned four different events and is expecting at least 75 members to start from the initial tee. The Crafton course is in fine shape, considering the scarcity of rain. The club formerly was the Thornburg Country Club and one of the oldest in the district.

If distance means anything, the Long Beach team, of Long Beach, Cal., will hold the record for long trips to the public links tourney, and beside the fact that the Californians are coming to try for both individual and the Harding Cup team prize, they are to put in a bid for the 1935 tournament.

Tomorrow, Dr. George Gregg defends his senior title over the links of the Oakmont Country Club, and if the popular Oakmonter can reproduce the form that he displayed in both the national and the local championship last year, he likely will retain the crown. Dr. Gregg plays a steady game over the famous Hulton terrain.

Wednesday, the second of the Pennsylvania State one-day tourneys will be staged over the links of the Pittsburgh Field Club, President George Flinn, Jr., of the association, expects 300 golfers to compete.

MEDICA SETS RECORD

LIBERTY LAKE Wash., June 18.—(AP.)—A new world record in the 500 meter swim was claimed today for Jack Medica. The Washington Athletic Club swimmer Saturday was clocked at 6:24 2-5 to shatter Buster Crabbe's record of 6:40 2-5.

IRISH HURLERS WIN

NEW YORK, June 18.—(AP.)—Kilkenny's Irish championship hurling team opened its American tour with a 14-9 victory over a selected New York aggregation before a crowd of 8,000 in the Polo Grounds yesterday.

FINAL BATTLE SCHEDULED TOMORROW

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

The third game of the series between the Pirates and New York Giants, scheduled for this afternoon at Forbes Field, was postponed on account of rain. The canceled contest will be played off here as part of a doubleheader Wednesday, August 15.

The world champions and Buccos will close their present series tomorrow when they stage a single contest. The Braves will follow the Giants as the attraction here.

TEAM ON SKIDS

Manager Gibson today was a bit bewildered as he tried to reassemble his battalion which has been in a tailspin since Casey Stengel brought his Dodgers to town last week. When the Pirates bowed to the Giants, 9 to 3, yesterday, they rang up their seventh setback in eight games.

Several hundred fans in the crowd of 16,000 sitting in on the Sunday spectacle booed Manager Gibson personally for the failure of his club to make a better showing against the world champions. Gibson did not seem to mind the discords as he went to the coaching lines throughout the game.

Frank O'Doul's pinch homer with the bases filled in the sixth inning ruined the Pirates for the afternoon. It was anybody's game up to the moment of the round-tripper into the rightfield stands. Heinie Meine had just given Blondy Ryan an intentional pass with runners on third and second to bring up Catcher Mancuso, but Manager Terry showed the Pirates some strategy which the home club might well imitate, as he sent O'Doul to the plate in place of his first-string receiver.

P. WANER HITS HOMER

NATIONAL'S EASTERN CLUBS MAKE FINE SHOWING IN WEST

YANKEES HOLD SLIGHT EDGE OVER TIGERS

Associated Press.

One of the most surprising and important developments the National League race has produced so far this season lies in the showing of the so-called weak clubs of the Eastern sector of the circuit in the Western tour which began early last week.

Instead of taking it on the chin all around, Boston, Brooklyn and Philadelphia have dealt out blows right and left to the West's pennant contenders, while the league leading Giants took the occasion to improve their position by winning five out of six.

The Phillies' double setback at the hands of the second-place Cardinals weakened the Eastern drive a bit yesterday as the hurling of the Dean brothers, plus their rivals' lack of effectiveness, gave the Cards the decisions by 6 to 0 and 7 to 5. Paul Dean pitched five-hit ball to win his eighth straight decision in the opener and Brother Dizzy appeared in time to get the victory in the eight-inning nightcap.

CARDS STILL TRAIL

The double victory left the cards three games behind the Giants, who humbled the Pirates 9 to 3 with the aid of Lefty O'Doul's pinch homer with the bases full. The losers almost dropped into the second division but saved fourth place by one percentage point when the Braves and Cubs divided a bargain bill.

Boston won the opener 4-2 as a four-run burst against Bud Tinning in the second carried Fred Frankhouse to his tenth mound victory. The second clash went 11 innings before Chuck Klein socked his seventeenth homer and produced a 3-2 Cub triumph.

Brooklyn took two games from Cincinnati's lowly Reds, 4-2 and 9-7, w inning each on a three-run rally in the ninth, and made it five out of seven in the West.

Detroit and New York failed to reach any decision in their duel for the American League lead, splitting a doubleheader and leaving the Yanks with the one-game margin they gained Saturday. Lefty Gomez held the Tigers to five hits in the opener to win 3 to 2 for his eleventh mound triumph. Vic Sorrell turned the tables with a three-hit hurling job and won 5-2 when Hank Greenberg's homer climaxed a three-run eighth inning rally.

NATS STOPPED

Washington, which captured third from Cleveland by winning Saturday's twin bill, held the place by a few points despite an 8-to-4 shellacking from the Indians. An early attack on Earl Whitehill did the trick and ended the Senator's six-game winning streak.

The Athletics took the day's best pitching duel from Chicago, 3-2, as Johnny Marcum allowed three hits and Milt Gaston 4.

Boston, in fifth place, and St. Louis, in sixth, split a twin bill. The Browns slammed out a 10-7 decision in the first clash on Al Bejma's homer, and the Red Sox won the six-inning afterpiece, 6 to 3, although Lefty Grove was knocked out in the final frame.

Aspinwall Outboard Racer in Hospital

MERCER, Pa., June 18.—Ira Dale Perry, 28, of Aspinwall, is in Grove City Hospital with injuries received yesterday when his motorboat overturned and was struck by another boat by Jimmy Aultman, of New Kensington, in one of the feature outboard motorboat races at Stoneboro. More than 2,500 people saw the accident.

Leon Guthrie, Cleveland, won Class A; Aultman took Class B, R. H. Hubbell, Erie, was first in Class C and Irwin Leroy, Youngstown, won in the free for all.

Shady Loft Wins Vandalia Flight

A bird to the Shady Loft of the Manchester Racing Pigeon Club turned in the best speed average in the 500-mile race from Vandalia, O., staged by the Pittsburgh Racing Pigeon Center yesterday. The bird's mark was 11.60.52.

In second place came a pigeon belonging to F. A. Tuma, Jr., of the North Side Combine, 1155.92.

C. Knuth, of the Troy Hill Club, had a bird in the 1155.46 class for third.

A bird flying to the loft of J. Wittchen, of the Pittsburgh Racing Pigeon Concourse won the 300-mile event in the fine time of 15.76.04.

MORTON C. MANDELL . . . AMONG FIRST TO ENTER HEARST GOLD CUP RACES, JULY 14-15

Mandell, an attorney, well known in motor-boat racing circles, is among the first of a group of out-of-town drivers to file their entries for the two-day outboard motorboating carnival to be held by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and the Oakmont Boat Club at Oakmont next month. Others include C. H. Nunelly, of Algonac, Mich.; Johnny Edgar, of Troy, O., and Arrell Reinking, of Indianapolis. This is a Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph picture of the Cleveland contender.

Teams competing in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's Western Pennsylvania amateur softball tournament have until Friday midnight to add players to their rosters or substitute others for the ones already filed with this office. No player who has not been signed by the manager on or before the aforementioned date will be eligible to compete in the playoffs which will follow the preliminary round robin.

The teams are permitted to carry 16 active players. This includes the manager, if a player.

SOFTBALL SLANTS

The Kirby Transfer team would like to book games with teams that use the 12-inch softball. For games call Grant 6698 in the afternoon.

Ray Gonzales' splendid relief pitching enabled the Covington Aces to defeat the Schenley Falcons, 7 to 5, in a Bracket II game of the junior division. T. Stazlak and J. Schuh hit the ball hard for the winning team.

The Staabs and Weise Newsies scored victories in the senior division of Bracket VII. Staabs downed the Weinbergs, 17 to 2, and the Newsies defeated the Morgan Blue Birds, 18 to 6. Hillen, W. Johnson and D. Johnson hit home runs for the Weise team, while Wible clouted one for the Blue Birds. Ed Lang's pitching was the outstanding feature of the Staab-Weinberg contest.

The Brown Buddies, of Duquesne, won from the Meredith Groceries, 26 to 7, in a Bracket I game of the girls' division. Pitcher Morgan, Frierson and M. Klingsmith starred for the Buddies.

In the senior class games played yesterday, the Hunzekers overcame a five-run lead to down the Holy Rosary No. 2 team, 12 to 5, and Campbell Box Lunch defeated Holy Rosary No. 1, 11 to 1, in Bracket III contests. Al Anderson's fine relief pitching featured the Hunzeker battle. He held the opposition scoreless for the six innings he pitched. E. Anderson and Johnny Malley each had a perfect day at bat for the Hunzekers. Miller and Oskins hit home runs for Campbell.

The Mooneys scored a 5-3 victory over the Speedways in a Bracket IV battle. Catcher Hutchko hit a home run with the bases loaded in the first inning for the Mooneys. Book Shoe defeated the Ruffe Ramblers, 10 to 8, in another Bracket IV contest in the senior class. Pitcher Mehall, of the Books, held the Speedways hitless for six innings and in the entire contest yielded only six bingles.

The Dragons defeated the Overbrooks, 7 to 3, in a Bracket V contest. Berster, M. Meiser and McAvoy starred for the Dragons, while Heber played best for the Overbrook team. Heber hit a homer and a triple.

Pitcher Cooms of the Waverlys, hit and hurled his way to victory over the Golden Panthers, 23 to 3, in a Bracket I game of the junior division. He hit three home runs and a triple. S. Wynn, also of the Waverlys, was a big gun at bat.

The Acme Club, of the Hill District, defeated the Panthers, of Carnegie, 7 to 3, on the former's field. Pitcher James Davis and Outfielder Bill Magnotti played well for the Acmes.

The West Newton Scholastics tallied five runs in the sixth inning to defeat the Maroni team, 15 to 14, in a girls' division bracket 1 game. Miss Ferrone, of the Maronis, starred at bat, while Miss Nuttall's relief hurling enabled the Scholastics to win.

George Schwarzkoff is slated to pitch for the St. Peterites against the Majestics today in a Bracket 1 game of the junior division on the Peabody High School field.

By HONUS WAGNER,
Former Star, Now Coach of Pirates

To the Sports Editor:

I understand one of the newspaper writers in a National League city has been getting heck from some fans because he is kinda outspoken and when the team is playing like Mrs. O'Grady's washwomen he says so. Some fans think the baseball writer should always praise the team and alibi for it when it loses. I don't think that is smart for baseball or for newspapers. Maybe you could kid the public 30 or 40 years ago, but people like to be told the truth nowadays. This is just one more way I think the modern ways have got it all over the so-called "good old days."

PRO ACES MEET IN PLAYOFF

PEORIA, Ill., June 18.—(AP.)—Lighthorse Harry Cooper, of Chicago, and Ky Laffoon, young Denver professional, survivors of one of the dizziest scoring tournaments in golf history, met today in an 18-hole overtime battle for the western open golf championship.

When the pellets stopped sailing over the sun-baked expanses of the Peoria Country Club course yesterday, Cooper and Laffoon were deadlocked for the lead with a near-record-breaking total of 274 shots for 72 holes.

South Park Trio Scores Polo Win

The South Park polo team, with Sid Landeau leading the way with six goals, defeated the Chartiers Heights riders, 9 to 2, in a league game at Adler's Field yesterday.

Playing on the East McKeesport Field, the Old Furnace team nosed out McKeesport, 10 to 9.

CRACK RUNNERS HAND K. O. TO FATHER TIME

By JESS CARVER

Add last week's knockouts—Father (Scythe) Time by Glenn Cunningham and Ben Eastman. The ol' kid is having a tough time recovering. He'll be a long time making it.

Eleven years ago Paavo Nurmi, the Finnish antelope, chased a mile in 4:10.4. The boys stood up on their legs and cheered madly as they believed they'd seen the greatest mile that ever would be run. They even wet their fingers and held 'em up to the breeze to see if Nurmi hadn't had the wind at his back.

A year or two later, Jules Ladoumegue, of France, gathered in the record with his 4:09.2, and last year Jack Lovelock, of England, came over here and on the same Princeton track stepped the 5,280 feet (1,760 yards to you) in 4:07.6.

30,000 WITNESS MEET

Saturday afternoon, before 30,000 customers in Princeton's Palmer Stadium, Cunningham, his powerful legs striding in rythmical and opposition-killing fashion, pounded about the Princeton cinder track in 4:06.7 to bring to the United States the mile record and claim for this country supremacy in human speed at all standard distances from 100 yards to a mile.

What next? Will some inspired (and don't think for a second Cunningham wasn't just that on Saturday) hero beat four minutes for the distance? What, you say now well, maybe you are right, but how we, all of us, all chuckled and chortled when some wise head not so many years ago predicted that someone would beat 4:10.

Cunningham was inspired on Saturday. Hardly 10 minutes before he toed the mark for the heralded mile duel with Bill Bonthron, Princeton's great star, Eastman had set a new world mark in the half mile of 1:49.8. It was blasing hot, excitement permeated the air like cooking cabbage in the Ritz and it got into Cunningham's blood. The crowd was on edge, tense, and Cunningham took on some of this fervor.

BONTHRON HELPLESS

Away they went, or rather, away went Cunningham. Bonthron's famous last quarter "kick" was run out of him by the half way mark. Cunningham ran as no one ever had run a mile before. He was turning in close to 60 second quarters, which are some quarters when you've four of them to piece together all at once. When the time came for Bill's kick, he was 40 yards in the rear and his kick was even further behind.

What a man Cunningham! The Hoosier star, as a kid, suffered severe and almost fatal burns, which rendered his legs almost useless. Skin has been grafted on his limbs, skin so transparent that one can almost see the workings of his powerful muscles. He took up running to escape paralysis, and ran himself into the title of the greatest runner ever.

Don't pass up Eastman. The blond Californian climaxed a brilliant comeback with his heroic 880 on Saturday. He was running against a man, Chuck Hornbostel, who never before had been beaten at the distance. Eastman won by five yards.

If you want a swell speed parlay—how about Cunningham, Eastman and Cavalcade, all to win?

VINES BEATS TILDEN

CLEVELAND, June 18. — (AP.) — Ellsworth Vines won the western professional tennis championship from Bill Tilden yesterday in four sets, 2-6, 8-6, 6-2, 6-3.

BAER ANOTHER HAIRCUT AND SHAVE GUY

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

Max Baer, the new heavyweight champion, is another one of those shave and a haircut men of the ring, which means that he is not long on training methods, and needs very little actual conditioning to prepare him for a battle in the ring. Just about a haircut and a shave and he's ready.

He is a young man who has supreme confidence in his ability to knock out his opponents in a punch and to stand up under the best efforts of his antagonists.

He is another Harry Greb, another Maxie Rosenbloom, in this respect. A lover of life and all that goes with it. A young man who fears neither man nor beast and doesn't worry about consequences.

Danny Frush, a former featherweight, who now conducts a gymnasium in Baltimore, was speaking of Baer in the lobby of a New York hotel on the day of Max's fight with Primo Carnera. He couldn't see anything to the fight but Carnera, and not without reason. He said:

"Some months ago Baer was in Baltimore for a week's theatrical engagement, and his manager, Ancil Hoffman, brought him to my gymnasium and pleaded with me to get him to take a workout. Said the big fellow was far out of condition and was shunning training. He was having his fling, surrounded by pretty girls, who haunted his hotel and the theater.

"I finally induced Max to take off his clothes and work out. But it was a joke. Max was bored and tired easily. He couldn't hold up his hands. You can't tell me a fellow like that is going to whip a big tough fellow like Carnera, who knows how to box. I don't care whether Carnera can hit a lick or not. He has a good left hand and that's all he'll need to beat Baer."

I wonder what Frush's reactions were when he saw Baer murdering the giant that night.

If Primo really broke his ankle when he went down the first time in the first round against Baer, it is remarkable that he didn't show the effects by limping during the 10 succeeding rounds. So far as the ringside spectators could discern, he did not give any evidence of such an injury. Yet the X-ray pictures show that the ankle really was fractured. Primo himself thinks the accident occurred when he got up and took it on the run that first time. He seemed to be looking for a gate through which to escape from the ring. In his panic he may have turned suddenly on the foot, causing the small bone to crack.

In Jimmy Bronson's office in the Forrest Hotel in New York, hard by Madison Square Garden, is a picture frame containing probably the smallest check ever given a main bout boxer for his services in an important bout. It is for $3.19, Walter Neusel's reward for his bout with the giant, Ray Impellitiere, last December 29. With it is the Garden's box office statement. They are precious keepsakes of Bronson, who has an interest in the German boxer.

For that bout, Neusel agreed to take 50 per cent of the net receipts and guarantee his opponent $5,000. When the Garden settled with Impellitiere there was exactly $3.19 left for Neusel.

I asked Bronson why he hadn't deposited the check and learned there was a motive in his refusing to do so. He claims there was $25.51 left after Impellitiere was paid and that Neusel should have received this, but instead got only 12½ per cent of the amount. He added:

"I'll never cash this check. It is my revenge against the Garden people. It will keep them from balancing their books."

And he smiles wryly as he recalls that he was Gene Tunney's chief second when the Garden paid its largest check to a boxer for Tunney's second bout with Jack Dempsey, at Chicago, in 1927. Gene drew down almost a cool million dollars that night—$992,800, to be exact.

France Eliminated In Davis Cup Play

Chris Kontakis vs. Eddie Madey and Frankie Kid vs. Danny Devlin, 10 rounds each, West Springfield, Mass.

Pittsburgh's Max Baer—the man with the punch—Anson Green, Negro middleweight, of Homestead, boxes Paul Pirrone, Cleveland's veteran belter, in the 10-round main bout at Hickey Park, Millvale, tonight.

Now, our A. Green still is looking hopefully toward a bout with Ted Yarosz, although he hasn't been very impressive his last few times out, and he hopes to turn in another knockout against the Clevelander to bolster up his prestige.

Pirrone himself wasn't so hot the last time he showed here, being stopped by Carl Montebano, of Braddock, but since then he has gone over to Philadelphia and beaten Ken Overlin, who is highly regarded in the East.

SHEPPARD VS. MANCINI

Len Sheppard, of Detroit, another Negro boxer, is in the other 10-rounder, against Dominic Mancini, of the North Side. He takes the place of Jackie McFarland, of Canton, O., who has come up with a bad hand.

In three five-rounders, Patsy Hennigan, of Clairton, boxes Louis Di Santis, of Cleveland; Ralph Gizzy, of Donora, takes on Charley Blozevich, of Johnstown, and Al Farone, of the West End, tangles with Irish Jimmy Ferry, of McKeesport.

Incidentally, it is Eddie Zivic, and not Fritzie, who will meet Joey Costa in the windup at Hickey Park next Monday night. Fritzie will be the headliner there the following Monday.

FIGHT MOVIES HERE

but each club used three pitchers before the contest ended. Paul Waner's homer was the only Pittsburgh high spot of the contest.

Boss Gibson called off the morning practice today when he considered that the club has hit its worst slump since he ordered the players out for regular forenoon sessions. This he did when the Bucs flopped against the Dodgers. The Oaklanders grew worse with the additional practice so Gibby hardly knows which way to turn to step up the team.

The Pirates are getting all the worst of the breaks, but when a club is down things generally run in this way.

CHILLYSAUCE

Many of the fans raised Manager Gibson when this fight failed to realn third on Jensen's single in the fourth. Wit Cleveland all ready to let fly with the rocket, Gus probably would have lost out by more than 10 feet had he attempted the flight from first.

Suhr is regarded all over the league as a smart, swift baserunner who takes the advanced sack when he can. He knows when he can make the extra 90 feet and he was convinced yesterday he would have been cut down by the clever Giant outfielder. It is to be hoped, however, the Bucs will note the fine strategy used by Bill Terry, who overlooks no bets.

Pie Traynor has been in a batting slump since the Dodgers were in town. Van Mungo stopped Pie cold, but the fistual star is hailing other clouters in a similar way. Casey Stengel's ace recorded his tenth victory yesterday.

New York newspapermen with the Giants sent out a story today to the effect that Carl Hubbell has placed his famed screwball in comparative retirement. Carl has learned that he cannot retain his effectiveness if he uses the fadeaway pitches after his fashion of last season. The lively ball has changed his routine in such a way that he flips the screwball as a decoy for the most part.

When the Giants flop in New York they hear the Bronx cheer. The Pirates of late have listened to the Bobo Salute. Now there's a real raspberry, 100%.

J. O'LOUGHLIN VICTIM OF NET UPSET

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Second and third round stiffen battles comprise today's card of action in the forty-sixth annual Western Pennsylvania tennis championships, in progress now Saturday on the courts of the Shanton Heights Golf Club. Advent of the out-of-town contingent this morning was expected to heat up the competition aplenty, even beyond the exceedingly torrid temperature in vogue throughout the first two days of hostilities. For with luminaries of the magnitude of Sam Gilpin, first ranking Middle States ace, and Leroy Weir, Ted Thirward and Leonard Keith, crack Clevelanders, slated for play today, an impressive program lies ahead.

A large gallery beheld a diamante-laden Sabbath bill that saw Dr. John O'Loughlin, P. A. A. star and defender of the David L. McCahill Cup, swept from the lap by wiry Russ Unger, home club satellite, in the most astounding upset that the district is likely to run afoul of this season. Battling determinedly and often with brilliance, the tall Stantonian brushed through set one, backslid in stanza two and spurted through the decisive third canto to cop a 6-1, 1-6, 6-2 decision, which treated the assemblage to that rarest of spectacles. The sight of an O'Loughlin eliminated in the second frame of a local tournament.

DR. DAVE VICTOR

Meanwhile Dr. Dave, brother of the vanquished champion, clicked off Phil Henninger, a darkhorse performer, 8-2, 6-1, but still lacked the touch that renders him usually the most feared of Pittsburgh netmen. Other local favorites—Frank Smith, of Edgewood; George Henderson, Stanton hope, and E. A. Knoche, gigantic Mount Lebanonian, came through handsomely.

Bill Haseltine, youthful Philadelphian, who won the McCahill cup in 1930 and 1931, blew in a day early and polished off Harry Milton, Duquesne University entrant, in a nicely contested tussle, 6-4, 6-1.

GILPIN FACES COSTIN

This afternoon's slate thins Gilpin in against hard-hitting Bill Costin, with the survivor encountering Milton King Washington Heightsman from Kiski. Weir opposes Maurice Gurin, with Joe Madden lying in wait for the victor.

Men's doubles and perhaps women's singles will get under way tomorrow, the feminine event in the morning and the masculine late in the afternoon after the third and fourth-round singles. Entries in these divisions will close early this evening. Names will be received at the tournament desk on the grounds. The special phone is Emerson 9168. Women's and mixed doubles will not start till about Wednesday. Yesterday's summary

Schoonmaker, 6-2, 6-2. COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY OF GREATER PITTSBURGH

FACTORY MAKES NEW MODEL SPRING

In answer to today's demand for convenience comes a new bed spring feature, so simple that it hardly seems possible that bedding manufacturers have overlooked its value these many years.

Handles have been used on mattresses for the past decade, yet the bed spring, which is twice as heavy as the ordinary mattress, and as stubborn as a mule to move, has remained without this essential feature.

In this new spring the simple medium of two neat handles on each side of the frame has completely ended all worries on that score.

USE NEW SPRING

This is only one of the many improvements on a new double deck bed spring which is about to make its bow to the market. A new type of coil is so constructed that these turns are uniform from top to bottom instead of varying anywhere from one to five inches in diameter. This style of construction affords unusual solidity and results in an entirely different type of spring action from any heretofore featured, assuring a firm yet comfortable base for any type of mattress.

Very few changes have been incorporated in bed spring design since the introduction of the innerspring mattress, yet radically new rest principles are involved where this mattress is used.

NEW DESIGN

The felt or hair mattress depended upon the bedspring for all the springiness the bed would have to offer. When an innerspring mattress is used in conjunction with a bed spring, however, there are actually two spring constructions doing duty on the bed. This angle has been given special consideration in evolving this new spring so that overly much springiness, tending toward a "ship at sea" motion, could be avoided.

And if you have spent a night on a spring that, in the language of the day, "threatened to throw you" most any minute you will appreciate the "shimmy eliminator" which provides for utmost stability. As modern as the organization that is introducing it, the improved Sealy Supreme Bed Spring, a product of the Fort Pitt Bedding Company, offers you all that is new and different in bed spring construction.

STOCKS WAIT WASHINGTON DECISIONS

NEW YORK, June 18.—(AP.)—Congress refused to quit as per schedule and many stock market offices, consequently, retired to sidelines today to await further Washington developments.

Bullish and bearish sentiment seemed to be mixed, and prices of leading equities were in a similar condition. Dullness ruled throughout the greater part of the session, and attendance in the board rooms was generally restricted to odd-lot stragglers.

Last week's moderate revival of enthusiasm appeared to have evaporated to a considerable extent. Important news was lacking. Grains and other commodities provided no stimulus for stocks. Wheat, corn, cotton, rubber and silver milled about in an exceedingly narrow range. Bonds were only steady and price changes insignificant. The dollar edged up a trifle in terms of European gold currencies.

The heaviness of Freeport Texas, which was also a loser late last week, accompanied reports that the company was having operating difficulties with its new Louisiana sulphur deposits. Further selling of Westinghouse Air Brake was attributed to the recent paring of the corporation's dividend rate.

Most market commentators expressed the opinion that mild irregularity and dull trading probably could be expected in the next week or so, notwithstanding adjournment of Congress and the apparent settlement of outstanding labor controversies.

While cessation of legislative activities usually has called for considerable short covering, brokerage circles pointed out that the short position at the moment is so small that this factor may be relatively unimportant.

Some analysts, although not ignoring the inflationary potentialities inherent in existing administrative prerogatives, seemed to be encouraged by what they termed recent indications from the capital of a turn to the "right" which they believe "constitute the main bullish factor for the moment."

Three phases of the administrative program were being studied closely in the financial sector. These were: The implanting of recently enacted permanent measures such as the banking act and the stock exchange control bill; the overhauling of emergency recovery devices, such as the NRA and AAA, and the formulation of a long-range program, such as a land and water utilization policy and social reconstruction measures foreshadowed in the recent presidential message, together with possible sweeping revision of revenue laws.

WHEAT PRICES TURN DOWN

CHICAGO, June 18.—Influenced by good rains in various parts of the grain belt over the week-end, prices for all cereals averaged lower early today. Bears contended that there would have to be a further readjustment of values toward a world level.

Opening unchanged to ¾ down, September 93⅞-94, wheat later held near the initial limits. Corn started ⅜-¾ off, and subsequently altered little.

Will Chiefs Push On Recovery?

By B. C. FORBES

"THEY'RE always waiting for something."

That remark was made to me yesterday, in reference to business leaders.

Mr. Forbes

In my opinion, the time has come for men of affairs, now that the country is enjoying a respite from disturbing political experiments, to address themselves most earnestly and conscientiously to furthering recovery in business, in employment, in sentiment.

It has become a commonplace observation that politicians by themselves cannot restore normal employment, that only business and industry can achieve this.

Very well; business and industrial employers should now face this responsibility, this opportunity with old time American courage.

POLITICAL CLOUDS unquestionably have lifted considerably.

Congress has exhibited regard for business sentiment. It substantially modified the handicapping securities act, it toned down the original drastic terms of the stock exchange regulation bill; it was persuaded not to railroad the alarming Wagner bill on the statute books; it showed at least some disposition to soft pedal billion dollar appropriations for this, that and the next extraordinary purpose.

Moreover, the NRA has given definite assurance and evidences that it is pulling in its horns, that it has abandoned whatever ambition it may have had to dominate and regiment every phase of busines activity. At the same time, it has shown disposition to co-operate in retaining codes and policies which have proved actually satbilizing and helpful.

Furthermore brain trusters of the Warren and Rogers stripe whose revolutionary monetary and other ideas once threatened to prevail, have been relegated to the background, thus inspiring confidence that no further upsetting, tampering with our currency will be perpetrated by President Roosevelt.

WITH THE ADJOURNMENT of Congress and the President's contemplated extensive vacation, men of affairs can reasonably look forward to a period of freedom from political bombs.

Business statesmanship should impel them to go the limit in embracing this opportunity to upbuild both activity and confidence. No super human foresight is needed to recognize that the action of Congress when it reconvenes in January will be influenced vitally by the social, economic and financial conditions then prevailing. If distinct betterment has been achieved materially and mentally lawmakers logically will hesitate to indorse all sorts of experiments and will be disposed to let recovery continue unmolested.

On the other hand, if our men of affairs meanwhile shudder and shirk, bringing about wholly unsatisfactory conditions, Congress may be expected to support most readily another deluge of innovations and questionable panaceas.

ALL THINGS considered, America is exhibiting impressing recuperative powers.

RETAIL TRADE is well maintained. Steel orders, doubtless stimulated by recent strike fears, have been of notable volume. The automobile industry keeps busy, and price reductions may prove a tonic to buying during summer months. Such other yardsticks as electric power consumption, railway car loadings, bank debits are fairly satisfactory. Employment is at least holding its own. So is the general price level.

The securities markets have been giving a gratifying exhibition. Stocks ended the week higher; corporation bonds showed improvement; demand for government and municipal bonds became keener. Responses to treasury offerings continue phenomenally encouraging.

ALTHOUGH agricultural commodities are influenced by day to day weather changes, the undertone lately has been increasingly steady.

AMERICANS have become reconciled to expecting rather calloused treatment from foreign debtors. Non-payment of June 15 war debt installments and Germany's self pronounced moratorium on all foreign held bonds, including sacrosanct Dawes and Young issues, caused hardly a ripple on the exchanges.

Few practical results are expected to be harvested immediately by the power conferred on President Rosevelt to negotiate tariff and trade deals.

BY JULY 1 America's outlook for the second half of the year should be distinctly clearer.

The Thin Man

By DASHIELL HAMMETT

I was trying to decide whether to tell him about the lion and ostrich farms in the lower part of the state when the door opened and a fat, red-haired man brought Gilbert Wynant in. One of Gilbert's eyes was completely shut by swollen flesh around it and his left knee showed through a tear in his pants leg.

I said to Guild: "When you say bring 'em in, they bring 'em in, don't they?"

"Wait," he told me. "This is more'n you think." He addressed the fat, red-haired man: "Go ahead, Flint, let's have it."

Flint wiped his mouth with the back of a hand. "He's a wildcat for fair, the young fellow. He don't look tough, but, man, he didn't want to come along, I can tell you that. And he can run!"

Guild growled: "You're a hero and I'll see the Commissioner about your medal right away, but never mind that now. Talk turkey."

"I wasn't saying I did anything great," Flint protested. "I was just—"

"I don't give a damn what you did," Guild said. "I want to know what he did."

"Yes, sir. I was getting to that. I relieved Morgan at 8 o'clock this morning and everything went along smooth and quiet as per usual, with not a creature was stirring, as the fellow says, till along about 10 minutes after 2, and then what do I hear but a key in the lock." He sucked in his lips and gave us a chance to express our amazement.

"The Wolf dame's apartment," Guild explained to me. "I had a hunch."

"And what a hunch!" Flint exclaimed, practically top-heavy with admiration. "Man, what a hunch!" Guild glared at him and he went on hastily: "Yes, sir, a key, and then the door opens and this young fellow comes in." He grinned proudly, affectionately, at Gilbert. "Scared stiff, he looked, and when I went for him he was out and away like a streak and it wasn't till the first floor that I caught him, and then, by golly, he put up a tussle and I had to bat him in the eye to tone him down. He don't look tough, but—"

"What did he do in the apartment?" Guild asked.

Didn't Take Chance

"He didn't have a chance to do nothing. I—"

"You mean you jumped him without waiting to see what he was up to?" Guild's neck bulged over the edge of his collar, and his face was as red as Flint's hair.

"I thought it was best not to take no chances."

Guild stared at me with angry incredulous eyes. I did my best to keep my face blank. He said in a choking voice: "That'll do, Flint. Wait outside."

The red-haired man seemed puzzled. He said, "Yes, sir," slowly. "Here's his key." He put the key on Guild's desk and went to the door. There he twisted his head over a shoulder to say: "He claims he's Clyde Wynant's son." He laughed merrily.

Guild, still having trouble with his voice, said: "Oh, he does, does he?"

"Yeah. I seen him somewhere before. I got an idea he used to belong to Big Shorty Dolan's mob. Seems to me I used to see him around—"

"Get out!" Guild snarled, and Flint got out. Guild groaned from deep down in his big body. "That mugg gets me. Big Shorty Dolan's mob." He shook his head hopelessly and addressed Gilbert: "Well, son?"

Gilbert said: "I know I shouldn't've done it."

"That's a fair start," Guild said genially. His face was becoming normal again. "We all make mistakes. Pull yourself up a chair and let's see what we can do about getting you out of the soup. Want anything for that eye?"

"No, thank you, it's quite all right." Gilbert moved a chair two or three inches towards Guild and sat down.

"Did that bum smack you just to be doing something?"

"No, no, it was my fault. I—I did resist."

"Oh, well," Guild said, "nobody likes to be arrested, I guess. Now what's the trouble?"

Gilbert looked at me with his one good eye.

"You're in as bad a hole as Lieut. Guild wants to put you," I told him. "You'll make it easy for yourself by making it easy for him."

Guild nodded earnestly. "And that's a fact." He settled himself comfortably in his chair and asked, in a friendly tone: "Where'd you get the key?"

"My father sent it to me in his letter." He took a white envelope from his pocket and gave it to Guild.

I went around behind Guild and looked at the envelope over his shoulder. The address was typewritten, "Mr. Gilbert Wynant, The Courtland," and there was no postage stamp stuck on it.

"When'd you get it?" I asked.

"It was at the desk when I got in last night, around 10 o'clock. I didn't ask the clerk how long it had been there, but I don't suppose it was there when I went out with you, or they'd have given it to me."

Wynants' Letter

Inside the envelope were two sheets of paper covered with the familiar unskillful typewriting. Guild and I read together:

"Dear Gilbert:

"If all these years have gone by without my having communicated with you, it is only because your mother wished it so and if now I break this silence with a request for your assistance it is because only great need could make me go against your mother's wishes. Also you are a man now and I feel that you yourself are the one to decide whether or not we should go on being strangers or whether we should act in accordance with our ties of blood. That I am in an embarrassing situation now in connection with Julia Wolf's so-called murder I think you know and I trust that you still have remaining enough affection for me to at least hope that I am in all ways guiltless of any complicity therein, which is indeed the case. I turn to you now for help in demonstrating my innocence once and for all to the police and to the world with every confidence that even could I not count on your affection for me I nevertheless could count on your natural desire to do anything within your power to keep unblemished the name that is yours and your sister's as well as your father's. I turn to you also because while I have a lawyer who is able and who believes in my innocence and who is leaving no stone unturned to prove it and have hopes of engaging Mr. Nick Charles to assist him I cannot ask either of them to undertake what is after all a patently illegal act nor do I know anybody else except you that I dare confide in. What I wish you to do is this, tomorrow go to Julia Wolf's apartment at 411 East 54th St. to which the enclosed key will admit you and between the pages of a book called The Grand Manner you will find a certain paper or statement which you are to read and destroy immediately. You are to be sure you destroy it completely leaving not so much as an ash and when you have read it you will know why this must be done and will understand why I have entrusted this task to you. In the event that something should develop to make a change in our plans advisable I will call you on the telephone late tonight. If you do not hear from me I will telephone you tomorrow evening to learn if you have carried out my instructions and to make arrangements for a meeting. I have every confidence that you will realize the tremendous responsibility I am placing on your shoulders and that my confidence is not misplaced. Affectionately,

Your Father."

Admits Lie

Wynant's sprawling signature was writen in ink beneath "Your Father."

Guild waited for me to say something. I waited for him. After a little of that he asked Gilbert: "And did he phone?"

"No, sir."

"How do you know?" I asked. "Didn't you tell the operator not to put any calls through?"

"I—yes, I did. I was afraid you'd find out who it was if he called up while you were there, but he'd 've left some kind of message with the operator, I think, and he didn't."

"Then you haven't been seeing him?"

"No."

"And he didn't tell you who killed Julia Wolf?"

"No."

"You were lying to Dorothy?"

He lowered his head and nodded at the floor. "I was—it was—I suppose it was jealousy really." He looked up at me now and his face was pink. "You see, Dorry used to look up to me and think I knew more than anybody else about almost everything and—you know—she'd come to me if there was anything she wanted to know and she always did what I told her, and then when she got to seeing you, it was different. She looked up to you and respected you more. She naturally would, I mean, she'd've been silly if she hadn't, because there's no comparison, of course, but I—I suppose I was jealous and resented—well, not exactly resented it, because I looked up to you, too—but I wanted to do something to impress her again—show off, I guess you'd call it—and when I got that letter I pretended I'd been seeing my father and he'd told me who committed those murders, so she'd think I knew things even you didn't." He stopped, out of breath, and wiped his face with a handkerchief.

PRESIDENTS TAYLOR, FILLMORE, PIERCE—PASSING OF CHIEF COMPROMISERS—DANIEL WEBSTER'S FUNERAL

President Zachary Taylor (1848-1850), elected on the Whig ticket, is chiefly remembered for the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty with Britain (concerning an interoceanic canal across the American Isthmus), the Omnibus Bill (temporary solution of slavery question) and the Nashville Convention (extending division line 36° 30'N. Lat. to the Pacific). President Taylor died July, 1850; Vice President Millard Fillmore became President; he adhered strictly to party principles.

In 1852 Franklin Pierce on the Democratic ticket won overwhelmingly the presidency (1853-1857), with William Rufus King as Vice President.

The great compromisers dead (Calhoun, Clay, 1850; Webster, 1852), the slave question was revived again. Stephen A. Douglas forced the Kansas-Nebraska Bill (1854), fostering the "squatter" principle in territories theretofore free. Thus the Missouri Compromise became ineffective. This disrupted the Whig party into "Anti-Nebraskan" (later Republican) and "Know Nothing" parties. Kansas, nearest to the lands concerned, became the immediate battleground.

Commodore M. C. Perry (brother of the hero, O. H. Perry) negotiated a treaty with Japan, opening intercourse between U. S. and Far East. (U. S. History)

A MAGIC THAT CAN BE DONE

Stories about black magic tell you how to change one living thing into another. Each animal represents a certain character trait that it mostly displays. A dog is faithful, loyal. A cat is egotistic, false. A horse repays keep with hard work. A python lies in wait to crush and swallow anything. The cobra is ready to deal death.

We all have these and other character traits, and we remind people of that creature whose characteristics we display. People's reaction will be accordingly: Like, dislike, fear.

POPE PAUL III SANCTIONING SOCIETY OF JESUS

The Reformation resulted in closer union of Catholics, expressed in the founding of societies to counteract Protestantism. The most outstanding of these organizations was the Society of Jesus (Jesuits), founded by Ignatius de Loyola (1534). Their educational and missionary work became significant to humanity.

Another counter-agency, the Council of Trent, invited Protestants to their meetings endeavoring to have them return to Catholicism.

Unfortunately, peaceful means were not always employed to settle religious differences, violence often marking the efforts of both sides. (World History)

THE PLANETS JUPITER AND SATURN

Jupiter is the greatest planet in our solar system, having a mean diameter of 86,700 miles. Its mean distance from sun is 5.2 astronomical units. Jupiter shows red bands and a "Great Red Spot," possibly partly solid surfaces beneath clouds. Jupiter has 9 moons.

Saturn, the planet with 3 rings, shows faintly defined belts and changing white spots, probably clouds. The rings are composed of material like dust, grains of sand, rotating with the planet at varying speeds. The main density of Saturn is 0.7 x that of water, indicating little solid or liquid matter. Saturn has 10 moons.

MAMMALS, HIGHEST VERTEBRATES—THE DUCKBILL—ECHIDNA

Mammals are warm blooded animals, their skin bears hair, their body cavity is separated by a diaphragm into two parts, their heart has two auricles, two ventricles. They nourish their young by milk of the mother.

Mammals divide into sub classes; 1, Oviparous (egg laying), 2, viviparous (young born alive), comprising 16 orders. The two living kinds of egg-laying mammals are the platypus or duckbill (above) and the echidna or spiny anteater (right), found in Australia and neighboring islands. (105 III B)

The platypus lays two eggs and hatches them like a bird; the echidna lays one, places it into a pouch, carrying it until it hatches. (General Science)

RADIO WAVES—ELECTROMAGNETIC VIBRATIONS GENERATED BY OSCILLATING CIRCUIT

A condenser (1) consisting of metal plates of different polarity separated by insulators (air, etc.) can hold electricity, as a vessel holds a liquid. If electric charge becomes so great that electric tension overcomes the resistance of insulator between the plates or their conductor extensions forming a gap, electricity unites through the gap with a spark.

If the circuit (2) contains also a coil of wire in series, the electrical discharge will be oscillating, surging back and forth through the gap. The oscillations will have diminishing amplitudes (3).

These oscillating currents generate electromagnetic waves (4) called radio waves, expanding through space with the velocity of light (about 186,300 miles or 300,000,000 meters a second).

Frequency is the number of oscillations a second. As the distance traveled in a second equals the added length of all oscillations in a second, frequency x wavelength = 300,000,000 and wavelength = 300,000,000/frequency; also frequency = 300,000,000/wavelength. E. g. 500 kilocycle frequency (kilo = 1,000) corresponds to 300,000,000/500,000 = 600 meters wavelength. Radio waves, at present most important carriers of messages, in future will be also transmitters of power. Courtesy of The MacMillan Co. (Hadley: Everyday Physics)

Just Pre-Dating the Past

It's a little late for that kind of home work now. School was out a couple of years ago.

But the government never rests until the books are balanced as fine that a cat could walk through the department without getting red ink on his whiskers.

It all goes back to prohibition days which were all without being good. The money should have been kicked fourth for liquor taxes which didn't exist at the time.

Now, the question is to collect. There have been some pretty good suggestions from the heads of various departments. The best one is in a form of delinquent reprisal. Close their stills for 10 days.

Seems that the bootleggers didn't get out of business when the law said they should. And went into business when the law said they shouldn't. Even a swinging door don't work more ways than that. Now, they are cooking up their Stolen Broth, refilling empties and also print their own excise stamps. That last is a charming touch and indicates real genius if such a thing exists outside the two big broadcasting chains.

In order to collect the elapsed kale the G men may have to compromise with the bootleggers.

They might duplicate their European conquests and accept tokens.

Again, they may let things string along like spaghetti on a fork and take their edge out of profits.

Either way, it will be an interesting experiment to scan. The government has never been unduly harsh with the fugitive taxes of the second part. It is always willing to forfeit its judicial vengeance if you can lay it on the line.

If the tassee can dig up the tax plus the fine and accrued garnishings he can dodge the iron theater. That's what the bootleggers will probably do if they ever get around to it.

The longer they wait the bigger the sum will be. Interest is never postponed by rain. It looks like the question will be settled soon provided that the aggrieved parties don't get nasty and send their lawyers to the bat. In that case, we will nod off and leave a call for 1878.

The Crisis in Education

Plight of the Schools Is Due to the Squandering of Taxes on Oxcart Government

Public education is in jeopardy north, east, south and west today, because a horde of greedy and useless politicians is eating up the taxes which ought to go for the support of public schools.

School expenditures for the school year just ending are nearly two hundred million dollars below expenditures last year, and more than five hundred million dollars below expenditures for the same purpose five years ago.

And this reduction has been made in spite of the fact that total school enrollment is 675,000 greater than it was five years ago.

Recent surveys reveal that school revenues this year have been entirely inadequate to support an effective program of public education.

Two million children of school age have been deprived of any schooling this year or limited to school terms shorter than those available in rural districts in the days of their grandfathers.

Many public schools are no longer free and have been kept open only by charging tuition.

Vital school units and services, including kindergarten, health services and classes for handicapped children, have been discontinued.

The National Committee for Federal Emergency Aid for Education recently reported to Congress that school building programs have been almost completely abandoned. More than 400,000 pupils in city schools and a much larger number in rural schools are improperly housed.

Expenditures for school buildings are 74 per cent lower than they were five years ago and 76 per cent below expenditures in 1926.

The Federal Office of Education finds that 40,000 fewer teachers were employed this year than last and nearly 60,000 fewer than in 1932, in spite of the tremendous increase in the number of pupils enrolled.

More than 200,000 teachers—one-fourth of all school teachers in this country—are receiving less than $750 per year. This is the minimum amount allowed under the blanket code approved by the federal government for factory workers.

And approximately 85,000 of these teachers, according to the National Education Association, are receiving less than $450 a year for their services.

Recent returns from 29 states show that the amount of outstanding warrants and certificates of indebtedness for teachers' salaries in 14 states total more than thirty-three million dollars.

The same reports reveal that there were nine states with unpaid teachers' salaries amounting to a total of more than eleven million dollars and in six other states warrants were being cashed at discount rates ranging from 5 to 40 per cent.

In only eight of the 29 states covered by this survey were all teachers' salaries being paid in cash when due.

The crisis which exists in education in this country today is chiefly due to the fact that taxes wrung from the people are being recklessly squandered upon the upkeep of an obsolete system of county and local government.

This system is a hand-me-down from the days of the oxcart.

IT IS A NATIONAL DISGRACE AND A PUBLIC NUISANCE IN THE DAYS OF THE AUTOMOBILE.

Until the yoke of oxcart government is lifted from the necks of the public, public education in this country will remain in jeopardy.

Until 3,000 county governments are reduced by consolidation to 300, a horde of political parasites will keep on eating up the taxes that ought to go for the support of public education and other vital government services.

Until the administration of local government is purged of graft and its machinery modernized, millions of young Americans will continue to be robbed of that free schooling which is their birthright.

No candidate for Governor, on any ticket, in any state is worthy of support this year who will not pledge himself if elected to give the people of his state "fewer politicians and more and better schools."

For under the American system of government, the support and control of education is the responsibility of the several states and public education is the cornerstone of the American system.

Summer Recreation

Pittsburgh Should Provide More Hot Weather Entertainment

Impressed by the city's lack of facilities for recreation in summer, the Chamber of Commerce advocated several years ago the establishment of an aquatic park in the Squaw Run valley at its junction with the Allegheny River near Aspinwall. Nothing has yet come of the proposal.

Another plan to provide hot weather entertainment is now being considered by a committee of citizens. The plan is to give light opera in Schenley Park under municipal auspices. Some of the seats would be free, but there would be a charge for the best ones. St. Louis has made a remarkable success of a similar venture.

There are admittedly serious difficulties in the way of putting the scheme into effect here. Let us hope they can be overcome.

It would be good business for Pittsburgh to make the city more attractive in hot weather. A season of light opera would have cultural advantages, too.

Thirsty but Voiceless

Birds, Dogs and Other Pets Should Not Be Forgotten On These Hot Days

Saloonkeepers used to put water troughs in front of their places in the hope that teamsters, stopping to water their horses, would come in and slake their own thirsts.

But while liquor emporiums have come back, horses have largely disappeared, and with them the water troughs.

It is rather hard on birds, dogs and other pets these hot days. They cannot find water so readily as formerly. They become thirsty but cannot voice their need.

W. F. H. Wentzel, secretary of the Western Pennsylvania Humane Society, makes a suggestion which we are glad to pass along. He asks that water for birds and pets shall be made available in just as many places as can conveniently be arranged.

Political Gardening

(Copyright, 1934.)

A huge army of officeholders, performing no useful public function, has been created in this country through the obsolete system of county governments that bilks the American taxpayer of enormously large sums of public moneys annually.

Politicians nurture this crop of sinecures. Archaic, expensive and wasteful forms of government deplete the public treasuries and deprive education and other useful social agencies of their rightful share of public funds.

There is a rising tide of outraged public sentiment, noticeable in every state, to put an end to this fleecing of the people. Modernizing of government would be an outstanding constructive contribution to the science of popular government.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, June 18.—Diary: Up to say good-bye to Ray Long, Jr., against going to a boys' camp for summer. So breakfasting in Fullerton Weaver's new open air cafe at the Park Lane. Then at fuddy-duddying until Frank and Agnes Shutts, from Miami, came to sit awhile.

This day I articled another annuity. And by post a gay golf story from Rex Beach in Florida and a longer letter from Edison Marshall telling of a thrilling tiger hunt in Indo-China. And I skipped about skirling "Where's that tiger?" until Irvin Cobb dropped by with tayles of the gang in Houston.

To a Broadway cabaret for powsowdy and watched the lunatic actions of Jimmy Savo, foremost pantomimist of his day. And on way home fell in with David Wark Griffith, as youngish and handsome as in the days he was the deserved doyen of the silent screen. To bed reading again Kipling's "City of Dreadful Night."

Word drifts back to literary centers that Raoul Whitfield is on the last pages of his novel written on a New Mexico ranch. Whitfield, once of the Hollywood studios, married the former Emily Vanderbilt, who saundered all the social lemonmeringue for an adobe house in a remotely forlorn and elegiac whisper of the desert. They are miles from a railroad, without telephone and for domestic pets have two shaggy sheep dogs that suggest twin Heywood Brouns.

That they were not slain in cold blood is a tribute to the tolerance of the noblest gang of paper fiends that ever hailed dawn with hiccups.

Among summer joys is the close hair cut. Especially for that back of the head feel, like running the hand over a plush chair in the parlor car. Years ago leading Brummels went completely shavepate during hot months. My barber tells me that save for a pontifical podesta of Little Italy he has had only one customer ask for this ministration. He thinks it is because it suggests prison. Paul Armstrong used to stop headaches by close clips. And George M. Cohan went for one at intervals.

Guy Lombardo's face has been least publicized of all band leaders, although he is rather handsome in a dark Spanish caballero way. Scarcely anyone recognizes him on the street and somehow he has no pronounced characteristic that makes him distinctive after being seen on the rostrum. Yet, I am told that next to Vallee he receives the most mash-notes and is the favorite in select finishing schools.

For many seasons Larry Anhalt has been cradling drama during the summer months in a Connecticut townlet. He introduced Katharine Hepburn to stock when she was quite unknown and is the father of what is now called the Red Barn Circuit. Anhalt, once a prominent figure in the Broadway parade and successful, likes to experiment with raw material of the theater and revive the exquisite works of sometime neglected masters. He is among the very few producers not swayed by the box office. And a gentleman and scholar.

I'm going to quit trying to be folksey. The other day during a drizzle I was caught between traffic signals with a group of cops in the middle of the street. They were adjusting their rain coats and caps when I edged among them brightly to tell how I once wanted to be a cop. I had just cleared my throat when one turned, gave me a cold eye and with a thumb jerk barked: "Come on, you—take a walk!" I tried to stroll off indifferently whistling off key but I must have looked sillier than usual.

THE TWENTY-THIRD PSALM

THE LORD IS MY SHEPHERD. (Like some poor sheep, I wander with the human flock not knowing why I am nor where I go. I cannot see God's face nor hear His voice, for I am blind with ignorance and deaf with doubt and fear. Yet, as sheep feel the shepherd's guiding will, so do I feel the Force behind my life, and dimly sense a Purpose and a Plan. And when I falter something in me cries, "Go on? You are not lost; the Shepherd knows the fold to which you go.")

I SHALL NOT WANT. (My body may know poverty and pain. But God has placed within me secret springs which shall sustain me when I'm poor and weak. I still have Beauty, when my gold is gone; and Friendship, when my pantry shelf is bare; and Courage, like red wine, to warm my soul.)

HE MAKETH ME TO LIE DOWN IN GREEN PASTURES; HE LEADETH ME BESIDE STILL WATERS. (Earth pastures wither when the Winter's come. Earth waters dry when Springtime rains are done. But Love has pastures which are ever green and Faith has fountains which no drought can seal.)

HE RESTORETH MY SOUL; HE LEADETH ME IN THE PATHS OF RIGHTEOUSNESS FOR HIS NAME'S SAKE. (Two selves live in me, one a greedy brute, the other a bright stranger, whom I call my Soul. And often the fierce brute drives out the Soul. But something draws it back to me again and turns my face once more to SEEK THE TRUTH.)

YEA, THOUGH I WALK THROUGH THE VALLEY OF THE SHADOW OF DEATH I WILL FEAR NO EVIL; FOR THOU ART WITH ME, THY ROD AND THY STAFF, THEY COMFORT ME. (There are so many deaths in very life. Death of our loved ones; death of cherished dreams; death of our pride, and confidence and peace. Each day Death's shadow falls across our path. But bright against the shadow blazes Hope. For always after night the morning comes, and always after winter comes the spring. And not one grain of sand is ever lost. Shall man, alone, be wasted from God's hand?)

THOU PREPAREST A TABLE BEFORE ME IN THE PRESENCE OF MINE ENEMIES; THOU ANOINTEST MY HEAD WITH OIL; MY CUP RUNNETH OVER. ("Mine enemies." They are those foes that live in mine own self—my hate and fear, my envy and conceit. How often they have won the victory! But when I catch a vision of the truth and lift myself a little higher from the mire, then, for a time, I'm freed from my base self and know the pride and joy of some great conqueror.)

SURELY GOODNESS AND MERCY SHALL FOLLOW ME ALL THE DAYS OF MY LIFE, AND I WILL DWELL IN THE HOUSE OF THE LORD FOREVER. ("My Father's house". That's not some strange, far place, but just the common world in which I spend my days. All of my hours are His arching rooms. My life is built into His living walls. All that I am or do is part of Him. His mercy comprehends my blundering. His goodness girds His weak and stupid child. I cannot go so far that He is left behind.)

So, though I do not know the how or why, and though I never yet have seen His face, I need not fear. For where life goes, I go, and life is God. And I am part of His eternal mystery.

MARRY-GO-ROUND

By Helen Rowland

The Two-Way Marriage

It doesn't seem to matter much what brand of marriage you try, these days. Whether it's the old-fashioned steel-riveted, "till-death-us-do-part" marriage or the modern two-way variety, somebody is always trying to break the lock in wedlock.

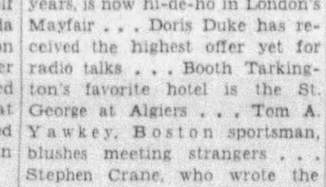
The news that the second Mrs. Bertrand Russell is seeking a divorce from the staunch apostle of modern untrammeled marriage must bring a grin of triumph to the faces of all those who still believe in quaint, old-fashioned marriage "with all the trimmings"—fidelity, constancy and permanence.



As the advocate of the heart-union, with no strings, ties, padlocks or obligations attached—the slip-knot marriage in which you can check out or check in as your fancy dictates—Bertrand Russell has been hailed as the discoverer of the fool-proof marriage and NOW look!

One of my most delightful memories is that of a debate between the charming Mrs. Russell and myself, before a famous woman's club, on the then burning subject of "companionate marriage." Never have I heard a more ardent and convincing defense of the two-way marriage than Mrs. Russell gave. But she hadn't a CHANCE! The audience was women—and their hearts were on my side, before I rose to speak.

* * *

The truth is that the two-way, free-and-easy, half-time marriage doesn't appeal to the average woman, because she has never known it to WORK. This "You-go-your-way-and-I'll-go-mine" sounds fine and broadminded and practical in theory. But it is playing with dynamite and pretending it's thistledown—and every woman knows it.

* * *

You can't add side-dishes to the love-feast without getting an awful case of indigestion. You can't be married and emotionally free at the same time. If you are, it isn't MARRIAGE. It's just a camouflage.

* * *

The secret of a successful and happy marriage is TEAM-WORK. And you can't do good team-work if each of you is pulling in a different direction. You're bound to smash the harness.

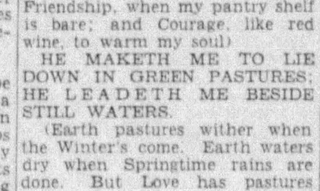
It sounds all very noble and generous and high-minded for a man to say that he wants his wife to have perfect liberty to seek romance or adventure. That it will "enrich her capacity for love." But just let her TRY it! Then he discovers that he's just atavistic. If he loves a woman, NO man can stand the thought of the "other man" without reaching for a club.



As for a woman, it is absurd to imagine that any normal woman is going to SHARE her man, calmly and sweetly, as she would a box of chocolates. And if she loves one man, she can't SEE another man. No woman has a double-action heart!

NOBODY wants to be one of a crowd in ANYBODY'S life. And that's why these part-time, free-lance marriages never work. You can modernize the kitchen, the plumbing, and the wedding ceremony—but you can't modernize human nature or the heart.

Woe to him that buildeth a town with blood, and stablisheth a city by iniquity.—Habakkuk, ii:12.

Failure of Disarmament Shows Defense Need

By James T. Williams, Jr.

TO AVERT either a breakdown or a blow-up, or both, Geneva's international farce—the co-called disarmament conference — has gone on summer vacation.

Instead of telling the peoples of the world the truth about this international farce, the governments guilty of staging it continue to deceive their respective peoples with various and sundry political "hush darlings."

It is high time that the people of the United States ask themselves these two questions:

What has happened to American defense since the great war ended?

How has the United States profited in relation to disarmament on the one hand and national defense on the other?

U. S. Now Third In Naval Power

EVER SINCE the armistice, the repeated efforts of the United States to bring about limitation and reduction of armaments have failed to accomplish anything substantial from an international point of view.

There has been a partial limitation of naval armament with the result that instead of a navy equal to the strongest, the United States now ranks third among the naval powers of the world.

But there has been nothing remotely resembling either universal disarmament or world limitation and reduction of armament.

In fact, only two nations have made any real reduction in their national defense forces since the armistice: Germany was disarmed by the war treaty; America, as an example to the world, has sacrificed supremacy on the seas for third place, and has reduced her combat forces available for defense of the homeland below those allowed Germany by the war treaty, and far below those maintained in Great Britain. Today, as a result, the United States ranks seventeenth among the military powers of the world.

Congress is to blame for this dangerous and disgraceful situation. Congress has surrendered to organized minorities clamoring for American disarmament by example. Congress has sacrificed the national defense to the greed of special privilege.

But for the vigorous leadership of President Roosevelt, the present Congress would not have halted the decline of the navy by beginning to build it up to treaty strength. And unless President Roosevelt rallies up an equally vigorous leadership in support of what is left of our regular Army the next Congress will doubtless continue to neglect to provide for the restoration of the army to effective strength.

Nothing Done To Strengthen Army

THE PRESENT Congress is about to adjourn without one single constructive legislative enactment for the strengthening of the regular Army. Buried in the House Committee on Military Affairs is a carefully drawn bill to provide for the establishment of a G. H. Q. air force that would give the Army Air Corps approximately 4,000 modern planes. Buried in the same committee is a progressive measure that would build the regular Army to peace-time strength and provide much needed training and much needed employment for thousands of reserve officers.

No committee of either house of Congress since the war has sunk so low in public estimation as the present House Committee on Military Affairs. It blocks all legislation for the national defense recommended by our ablest military authorities. It plays pork-barrel politics with the national defense. It aids and abets every sapping expedition against the nation's defense that promises any votes for Congressmen catering to the support of the agitators of unpreparedness.

After months of study and review of the opinions of our most experienced civil and military leaders, Congress enacted in 1920 a sound national defense policy. The lessons of our war experience were then fresh in the public mind and our national vision was clear. Theory and fanaticism were buried under the actualities of the immediate past. The realities of the Great War, coupled with first hand knowledge of the awful waste of lives and treasure for which our unpreparedness was to blame had deeply impressed the Congress then in session.

The National Defense Act is still the law of the land but the present Congress has paid no more attention to its obligations than the bootleggers did to the Volstead Act.

The powers of Europe and Asia are delighted to have the United States dependent upon a third ranking navy and a seventeenth ranking army. They continue to add to their defenses while Uncle Sam keeps on disarming as a gesture to the world.

The Kaiser's Sons Are Men of Varied Character—Abyssinia Seeks a Loan in America

By Edwin C. Hill

PRIDE goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall. A king went forth to the war, and with him his six sons. The king, an old disillusioned man, stricken in his age, lives out his years in exile. This is the story of his six sons, the five living, and the one who died by his own hand—the story of the Hohenzollern princes, Friedrich, Wilhelm, Eitel, Adalbert, August and Oskar.

They are all back in Germany and active, save the sailor, Adalbert, third and best looking of the Kaiser's sons. The crown prince, Friedrich Wilhelm, is no longer the swashbuckling blade of 20 years ago. He still likes his big, red, racing car, the theater and sports, but managing his own and his father's estates is a job which leaves few idle hours to this slim, nervous, white-haired man of 52.

He has steered pretty clear of politics, although he has been photographed several times recently in the front row of notables, attending some celebration in honor of Hitler, to whom at least he gives lip service, and it is said that he retains his bitterness toward France and his admiration for England.

Considered Able Man by Gerard

OUR FORMER Ambassador to Germany, James W. Gerard, has estimated the former Crown Prince is a man of real ability.

Eitel Friedrich, the second son, is no longer the striking figure, nor the popular prince of the German people. His once sturdy frame is buried in layers of fat. He emerged from the war a bully and a carouser. An unsavory divorce case cost him his post as Grand Master of the Knights of St. John, who don their purple coats, white breeches and ostrich feathers to swear eternal allegiance to the King of Prussia.

In place of Eitel Fritz, the Knights chose the Kaiser's fifth son, Oskar, of the Van Dyke beard, 44 years old and a militant nationalist. He was a romantic hero in his youth, when he took a morganatic bride, one of the ladies in waiting to his mother, the Kaiserin.

August Wilhelm, the other surviving son, chants the "Germany Awaken" battle cry of Herr Hitler, whom the prince hails as God's gift to the German people. And August suffered in the Hitler cause. He got a tidy clubbing about a year ago from police in Koenigsberg when he refused to get off a street corner with the rest of the Hitlerites. Policemen clubbing a Hohenzollern prince! There's a whole volume of history in that sentence.

And the old Kaiser, reading his Bible in exile in Holland, and thinking of his broken house, murmurs the words of David:

Lion of Judah Asks for a Loan

IT BEATS everything how the news gets around. Things pick up a bit in the good old U. S. A., and immediately the Russians want to borrow millions. Now comes the Lion of Judah, the King of Kings none other than Halli Selassa, the Emperor of Ethiopia, for a loan from America, or from France or England.

What about security? Well, this 40-year-old, slightly built, raven-bearded monarch who claims direct descent from King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba, has a crown studded with half a million dollars worth of diamonds, and a country rich in undeveloped resources.

A foxy chap, this dark emperor, who keeps lions for housecats. He usurped the throne and has kept Abyssinia independent from the British, French and Italians who are keenly interested in this mysterious land west of the Nile and east of the Red Sea.

Years ago, Italy sent an army against Abyssinia, and the Emperor Menelik, at the head of his wild horsemen from the mountains and the plains, almost wiped it out—one of the worst defeats ever suffered by a white force against native troops.

The Emperor Halli, who has visited Europe and who speaks and writes French, has kept up the military tradition of his people and makes Abyssinia a nut too hard to crack. The people are Christians, with a ritual that dates back to Solomon's Temple, and Abyssinian priests are among the traditional guardians of the Holy Sepulcher in Jerusalem. The faces of the upper class have a distinctly Jewish cast and some think they are descended from the Lost Ten Tribes of the old Jewish people.

It's a queer land all around, full of lions and hippopotami and crocodiles, where slavery is a cherished institution and debtors are chained to posts in the public street until they can pay their creditors. Go into Abyssinia and you step back into the Dark Ages of Europe, yet the contrasts are so amazing that you see airplanes soaring overhead and hear over the radio the stock market reports from Paris.

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Life Like Moonlight

O, for life as cool as moonlight,
Life as glamorous and white
As the beams from that far casement,
Opening into the night!

Not to hurry, willy-nilly,
Through the stir and stress of time;
But to pass, serene and stilly,
Silvering earth's stain and grime!

O, for life like moonlight, lending
Loveliness to sordid things,
Something of enchantment brings!

Moonlight! Gift of beauty, blessing
All things mean and commonplace,
Like a queen's pale hand caressing
Some poor peasant's fevered face!

ISN'T IT SO?

The only things fastened on women these days seem to be the eyes of men.

Most of us have neighbors who will borrow anything, including trouble.
